Search for knifeman robber who held up bookies

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

DETECTIVES are hunting a robber who threatened staff at a bookies with a knife before running off with cash.

Workers at William Hill in Cheriton Road, Folkestone, were left feeling shaken after a man entered the shop and ordered them to hand over money while threatening them with a knife.

He made off with a small quantity of cash and left the shop with another man, who had been standing by the doorway to the business. They turned left out of the bookies and ran off.

No-one was injured in the robbery, which happened on Tuesday, August 28, but staff were left shaken.

The robber who entered the bookies is male, of average build, and 6ft.

He was wearing a black jacket with the Nike tick logo on the left breast area, with the hood pulled over his head to conceal his face. He also had a red scarf round his neck and covering his nose. He was wearing black gloves.

Anyone with information can contact Detective Constable Jacqueline Mennie on 101, quoting crime reference ZY/24224/12.

Alternatively, if you have information but would prefer to remain anonymous, you can call Kent Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

COMMUNITY

FUN DAY DONATION JOY

ORGANISERS of a community fun day are celebrating after benefiting from a donation thanks to the Kent Police Property Fund.

Those behind the annual Hawkinge Fun Day have been presented with a cheque for £400 as recognition for their efforts and the positive effect on the area.

The Kent Police Property Fund is raised from auction sales of unclaimed lost property and items seized in police operations.

Inspector Jon Holl of the Shepway Neighbourhood Policing Unit handed the cheque over to the Hawkinge Community Events Group, which consists of volunteers of all ages.

This year's Hawkinge Fun Day is being held on the green in Heron Forstal Avenue on Saturday between noon-6pm.

EMERGENCY SERVICES

On-call fireman joins team after recruitment drive success

A NEW on-call fireman has joined the service – and will be able to spend time with his family while also being ready to protect the public.

Chris Adams has joined Folkestone Fire Station as an on-call firefighter with a pager alerting him to any emergencies which need attending.

The 41-year-old joined the crew after a Kent Fire and Rescue Service enrolment campaign, and will be able to get to the station within five minutes of the call.

He said: "I've had involvement with the fire service before but always wanted to get more involved and hands-on."

"I gained an interest in the fire service while working at Medway Hospital when I volunteered as a firefighter for Kent Air Ambulance."

of several weeks of training before joining the team.

The father of two added: "The training has been quite demanding with lots of work and new information to take in, as well as learning new physical skills, but it's all been very rewarding."

He is one of 17 on-call firefighters who will be joining stations across the county as part of the drive.

Training manager David Escudier said: "The course instructors have been amazed at the standard the trainees have reached – it is clear they have applied themselves to the programme and been supported at their own stations by the local crews."

KFRS is continuing its search for on-call firefighters to join Lydd and Dymchurch stations.

FOOD

Herman's growing success causes quite a stir in the county's kitchens

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

FIRST it was the chain letter, laced with veiled threats of menace if the recipient failed to pass it on.

Then it was emails, written in a similar vein, but easier to pass on with the click of a button or consign to the waste bin.

Either way, both succeeded in being equally as irritating.

But now the chain letter has evolved... it has become edible and, in its new form, a lot less threatening.

Called Herman, this German-born friendship cake consists of a sourdough mix, which dates back centuries and was previously passed around to the sick and needy.

Today, it is passed between friends and is currently sweeping the county.

Herman comes with a set of instructions to tell you when he is hungry, what he must be fed – a mixture including flour and sugar – and how often he must be stirred.

This phenomenon is slowly, but surely making its way around Kent; with the end result proving a tasty incentive to spread the word.

And unlike the traditional chain letter, which threatens terrible things to the recipient if they fail to pass it on, the worst that could happen is Herman could 'die'.

The starter mix is made of yeast, flour, sugar and milk and the bubbling, smelly concoction must be nurtured for 10 days until it is split into five. The original 'carer' bakes their cake and passes the divided mixtures to four friends who carry on the process.

Due to the contents of the mix, there is no sell-by date and it can be passed on continuously.

The craze is gathering momentum with internet forums including Netmums and Mumsnet talking about it as well as schools getting involved.

Children at Rodmersham Primary School looked after their own Herman earlier this year before splitting him and passing him on to friends, and last month youngsters at First Steps Nursery baked several Hermans to raise money

Our reporter Marijke Cox finds love in the form of a pot of Herman goo...

WHEN I first noticed a Herman had appeared in my kitchen, I inwardly groaned. I had tried to avoid this situation by politely declining previous offers.

But here it was, bubbling at me and willing me to stir it.

After two days of virtually ignoring it, I started to feel bad about the mixture which had somehow managed to, in my head, become a real thing – particularly since, due to my lack of stirring, it had grown and grown until it had virtually consumed the tea towel draped over it.

At this point, 'it' changed to a 'he'. So I started to nurture the smelly mixture and, sadly, would find myself enquiring about his condition when I wasn't there: "Have you stirred him? Has he been fed?"

On the ninth day of him sitting on my sideboard I 'fed' him and split him into five, ready to pass him on.

I fed and baked my own portion and, true to the accounts of Herman owners before me, it was one of the most delicious cakes I have eaten.

I didn't even feel bad about putting what had become a kind of pet into the oven.

Now my colleagues are all breeding their own Hermans and by all accounts have become just as attached.

for the Pilgrims Hospices.

Food blogger Toby Adams, from Foodie Frolics, wrote about his own experience with the cake mix and Herman's subsequent "family-tree" in Kent.

He explained: "We were given Herman by some Canadian friends in a small jar simply labelled 'Herman'.

JOINING IN: Herman cake is fun for all the family

"After the confusion lifted, we worked our way through the 10-day schedule and developed an almost human relationship with the bubbling cake mix.

"After stirring and feeding him for almost two weeks we got to the final stage of separating Herman up to give to others and baked the rest.

"It was truly delicious. Herman now has a small family tree in this area and this continues to grow as friends of friends keep passing on the Herman goodness."

Mr Adams said the end result was a "true culmination of the labour of love put into Herman".

Those who haven't heard or seen a Herman will likely have one in their kitchen soon.

For a Herman recipe see www.hermanthegermanfriendshipcake.com – or simply ask friends of family.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Goldfish are dumped

MORE than 50 domestic goldfish have been found dumped in a river.

The fish were found in a stream beside the Great Stour in Chartham and removed by the Environment Agency.

Fisheries officer Steve Smith said: "When people clean out their ponds, it is important the fish are only put into ornamental ponds and not rivers and lakes. Even healthy looking fish can carry disease and kill fish in lakes and rivers."

➔ Games prove big hit

THE British Transplant Games have been hailed a huge success after thousands cheered on almost 600 athletes in Gillingham.

The event, to be held in Sheffield next year, brings together those who have undergone a transplant and is designed to highlight the benefits of registering as an organ donor. The four-day event came to a conclusion last Sunday, just in time for the start of the Paralympic Games.

➔ One Direction in town

TEEN heartthrobs One Direction shot a video for upcoming single Live While We're Young in a field in the county last weekend.

The X Factor stars, turned chart-toppers, were seen jumping on bales of hay and sharing a paddling pool with a host of female models.

However, the group's record label were keeping tight-lipped about the exact location of the shoot this week.

The boy band have sold a remarkable 12 million records in the space of a year, after going down a storm in the US.

TRAGEDY

Cows killed by an 'exploding tree'

A FARMER is counting the cost after a freak bolt of lightning caused a tree to explode, killing a herd of cows sheltering from the storm beneath it.

The farmer, who did not want to be identified, confirmed the cattle were all killed by the act of nature at the farm in Shepway.

Speaking to our reporter they said: "It killed the lot. It's very upsetting."

A source within the agricultural industry explained: "About nine cows were killed in one go.

"The herd had been sheltering under the tree and then it just exploded because it was struck by lightning.

"Tree trunks can explode if struck by lightning when the sap is exposed to an extreme heat and becomes high-pressure steam. It literally makes the tree blow up."

Although tree explosions are rare, it happens more if the trunk is in a rotten state.

National Farmers' Union livestock adviser for the south east, James Osman, said:

"This incident is clearly very upsetting for the farmer involved, although it is a freak natural occurrence.

UPSETTING: Such a tragedy is a rare occurrence

"Cattle are known to sometimes shelter under trees during bad weather; however, it is important to note that situations like these are extremely rare."

Texas A&M University agricultural expert Brent McRoberts added: "Unless there is a barn nearby, livestock are out in the open during thunderstorms, so their chances of being hit are greater."

Some 19 cows also died recently whilst hiding under a tree during a heavy storm in Canada, and a herd of 16 bullocks were killed under the shelter of trees in East Lothian in 2009.

DEVELOPMENT

Brownfield site to be transformed by tens of thousands of homes and jobs

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

AMBITIOUS plans for thousands of new homes in north Kent have been given the go-ahead, delivering up to 60,000 new jobs and a major boost to the area.

An agreement was reached by government ministers, Dartford and Gravesham councils, Kent County Council and developers Land Securities this week in a historic step forward in what has been a project plagued with setbacks for more than a decade.

The deal involves the development of around 22,600 much-needed homes in the area over the next 20 years, bringing a brownfield site back into use and with it creating up to 60,000 jobs.

The first phase is at Eastern Quarry in Ebbsfleet and will deliver 1,500 homes as part of wider plans for Kent Thameside, with a further 3,000 homes expected to be complete by 2030/31.

This is expected to unlock the development of 22,600 homes and around one million square metres of commercial development across the Kent Thameside region.

Builders could be on site as early as next summer, with the first homes set to be completed by December 2013.

Leader of KCC Paul Carter said getting the significant development under way signals the council's continued drive to increase construction activity in Kent.

"We have real growth ambitions and this site signifies our intent to unlock the potential of the Thames Gateway," he said. "Where sites are stalled we will talk to developers about ways of releasing sites in the short term."

Developers Land Securities had invested more than £100 million in developing the Eastern Quarry site. However, plans were delayed amid concerns over the cost and the need for further investment in transport improvements.

But a £116m homes and roads programme was drawn up by councils, ministers and developers, which has helped get the project moving.

The package includes major junction improvements at the A2 by Ebbsfleet and Bean – with work due to start imminently – as well as work on the A226 London Road/St Clements Way junction.

Enhancements will be made to Dartford town centre and Rathmore Road Link in Gravesham, and there will be a dualing scheme on the A226 Thames Way in Ebbsfleet.

KCC, Dartford and Gravesham councils worked with the Department for Transport and Highways Agency to agree how funding could be unlocked. It includes a £25m contribution from Land Securities through the completion of 4,500 homes on the site by 2020, £13m support from the Homes and Communities Agency and a proportion of KCC's New Homes Bonus payments.

Dartford and Gravesham councils will also ensure that contributions from Land Securities and other sites are provided to support the transport programme.

Leader of Dartford Borough Council, Jeremy Kite, admitted it had been a "long road".

"This finally seems to be our opportunity to build a great community and top quality housing for a new generation of Dartford families," he said.

"Housing for children of local people is a real responsibility and Eastern Quarry provides a great setting for young people to build their lives."

FUTURE:

Around 22,600 homes and 60,000 jobs will be created at Ebbsfleet

Hospitals in fire drama

AN investigation has been launched after fires were sparked in both the Kent & Canterbury and Medway Maritime hospitals this week.

Emergency services responded to fires in Gillingham on Wednesday and Canterbury on Thursday.

Patients were evacuated and no-one was injured.

It is not yet known if both fires are linked and an investigation is under way.

City venue shuts down

A POPULAR Canterbury venue run by the team behind the successful Lounge on the Farm festival has been forced to close after failing to come up with £5,000 in overdue rent.

The Farmhouse in Dover Street has been a well-known pub, restaurant and live music venue in the city for the last four years, but admits a difficult summer has forced it out of business. Management insist it will have no impact at all on the festival.

PARALYMPICS

Race track ready for cyclists

LEGENDARY racing circuit Brands Hatch will replace its high octane thrills and spills with a very different form of high-speed action this week as thousands flock to watch the Paralympic road cycling.

In one of the most significant international sporting events it has held since it last hosted a Formula One Grand Prix back in 1986, the circuit will welcome 225 athletes from 45 nations over four days of race action.

Starting on Wednesday and running until Saturday, the 8km track will host 32 races and time trials as athletes compete for gold.

Thousands will line the grandstand within the venue, with thousands more expected to line streets around the venue as the racers take to the open road for part of the races.

Incredibly, among the competitors will be former four-wheel race ace Alex Zanardi.

The ex-Formula One racer saw his life forever change after a smash during a Champ Car race in Germany. The Italian lost both legs as a result of the crash in 2001. But he has got to grips with a three-wheeled bike powered by his hands and will be hoping to win a medal.

The venue has been described by the International Cycling Union as the "best paracycling venue of all time" and the British team are expected to be contenders for medals after the Games in Beijing 2008, which saw a haul of five gold and two silvers.

READY: Paralympian Rachel Morris with Lord Coe and Brands Hatch's Jonathan Palmer

Capacity inside the venue has twice been expanded and demand for the £10 tickets has accelerated after the nation was caught up in excitement generated by the Olympics.

Roads around the venue will be closed while racing takes place – a move which has angered local traders, left fuming they will be inconvenienced for such a period.

A spokesman for Sevenoaks District Council, said: "We're encouraging everyone to come and support these inspirational athletes. Spectators without tickets can use the free park and shuttle service at Wrotham Hill and get a great view of the action from the roadside."

"Alternatively, LOCOG have recently released an additional 2,500 tickets per day for this event. Tickets enable holders to reserve a parking space at Brands Hatch and to enter the venue to view the start and finish line and podium."

■ Coverage of the Paralympics is being shown on Channel 4.

DEVELOPMENT

State-of-the-art campus delayed

K COLLEGE has slammed the brakes on plans for a multi-million pound campus in the centre of Ashford – just weeks after confirming it is to shed some 140 jobs.

The college, created through the merger of West Kent and South Kent colleges in 2010, had planned to redevelop its site at Elwick Road, with work due to have started earlier this year.

But it confirmed this week that as part of a wide-ranging review of its 'property strategy', plans were being postponed.

Work is now not expected to begin for at least two years. And when it does, it would appear to be on a smaller scale.

It will come as a huge blow to Ashford, which had seen the creation of an education hub in the town centre as a vital piece in the jigsaw of overhauling the heart of the town.

K College says it is undergoing major developments of its curriculum offer for the new academic year and is completing a staff restructure and review of its estate.

A college spokesperson said it was reviewing its financial position in the current economic climate "to ensure it is able to deliver the most appropriate curriculum in the long term" in the five towns it serves – Dover, Folkestone, Ashford, Tonbridge and Tunbridge Wells.

Principal of K College, Bill Fearon, said: "A new campus remains a key priority but we are now unlikely to be able to undertake a new build for at least two years.

"We have to budget within financial cuts and constraints that were not in place when we first embarked on the project."

K College senior managers are reviewing the options of an interim move to the centre of Ashford, working with Ashford Borough Council.

Mr Fearon continued: "The high cost of our campus in Jemmett Road means we are looking seriously at other locations. There is the opportunity to utilise a range of good, cost effective alternative accommodation. The support from the council is a major benefit."

All proposals are being reviewed and decisions will be made with the approval of K College governors, and the Skills Funding Agency – this is likely to take several months.

EDUCATION

English pupils deserve the chance of a re-sit, insists academy head

By Marijke Cox

A LEADING head teacher has called for a nationwide re-sit of the English GCSE exam in the wake of the grading scandal.

David Day, principal of the Isle of Sheppey Academy, said all pupils should have the opportunity to take the exam again in a one-off special re-sit in October.

He has appealed to the Association of School and College Leaders (ASCL), which is compiling a dossier of evidence submitted by hundreds of schools to hand to exam regulator Ofqual.

It emerged last week that grade boundaries in GCSE English had been raised significantly for pupils sitting assessments in June compared with those sitting early entry in January and March.

Figures show that pass-rate grade boundaries had been raised by as much as 10 per cent.

Government insiders have suggested the move was because January boundaries were too low.

Mr Day said: "I have suggested a one-off opportunity for a national re-sit in October and these results should count towards the pupils' grades and league tables. Special consideration should be given to allow this one-off re-sit."

Around a quarter of schools in the country, including the Isle of Sheppey Academy, saw the number of pupils awarded A*-C in GCSE English drop by five per cent since last year.

Mr Day, who in the past has won praise from Ofsted, was brought in to take over the Isle of Sheppey Academy last year. He questioned the fairness of raising boundaries between January and June: "How can you have a standard for early entries in January and March and then introduce a tougher standard in June?"

"There is a moral obligation for something to be done. Teachers say they are demoralised, and pupils will feel hard done by and face the prospect of a re-sit to try and get the standard they need. Some maybe didn't get a place in an A-level placement because they didn't get the grade they needed in English."

Mr Day said his school saw a one per cent improvement in the number of pupils achieving five A*-C grades including English and maths, pushing the rate up to 36 per cent.

But he admitted that had the English mark – which saw a five per cent drop – been as expected before last week's scandal, it would have pushed the number of children achieving five A*-C grades including English and maths above the 40 per cent national target.

Mr Day said he believed it was down to education secretary Michael Gove's desire to reintroduce O-Levels.

"This has devalued GCSEs," he said.

ASCL said a number of Kent head teachers had contacted the organisation concerned about the English results.

Kent branch secretary Ian Bauckham, who is head of Bennett Memorial School in Tunbridge Wells, said the matter needed investigation.

General secretary Brian Lightman added: "Exams have not been made more rigorous in a way young people and teachers can prepare for. What appears to have happened is that, halfway through the year, it was decided too many students were going to get a C grade in English and so the boundaries of the exam were pushed up."

"Standards in schools have not changed one iota. It is the grading that has changed."

"It is morally wrong to manipulate exam grades in this way – you are playing with young people's futures."

A spokesman for exam body Ofqual said that grade boundaries "change from exam series to exam series".

They added: "Decisions on grade boundaries are made after the assessments have been taken, based on all the available evidence. In summer, more information was available about performance across the qualification than in January."

"Exam boards considered this and made decisions accordingly, to make sure the final qualification grades were comparable with last year's."

"We are confident standards have been maintained and that the grades awarded are right."

CLEARING PROVES A SMOOTH PROCESS AS HUNDREDS CLAIM LATE UNIVERSITY PLACES

UNIVERSITIES have recorded little change in this year's clearing process, despite the looming introduction of the new sky-high tuition fees.

From this September, universities will be allowed to charge up to £9,000 every year. All four of the county's universities will be charging £8,300 or more.

But this has seemingly had no impact on this year's clearing, a process where students who receive unexpected grades or have no placement are able to get a university place.

A spokeswoman for the University of Kent, based in Canterbury, said the numbers had been "very buoyant".

"It's been a positive clearing," she said. "Everybody was wondering what was going to happen, but for us it's been a good year."

The University of Greenwich said an "unprecedented" amount of young people had been accepted through clearing at its Medway campus, having gained top grades.

"Our admissions tutors have been impressed by the very good quality of applications received," a spokesman said. "There has been a lot of interest in biomedical sciences, sports sciences and pharmaceutical sciences."

University for Creative Arts, which has campuses in Maidstone, Rochester and Canterbury, saw hundreds accepted through clearing following results.

Huge crowds expected at dockyard for arrival of the Antiques Roadshow

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

TV FAVOURITE the Antiques Roadshow rolls into Chatham this week, hoping to emulate the remarkable discoveries the BBC experts made the last time the show came to Medway.

Chatham's Historic Dockyard hosts the hugely popular filming this Thursday, September 6, with presenter Fiona Bruce joining the likes of Paul Atterbury, Henry Sandon, Hilary Kay and Geoffrey Munn pouring over the collection of items brought along by members of the public.

The last time the roadshow was in the area was back in 2007 when Rochester Cathedral hosted the TV cameras.

Back then, there were a host of notable finds, among them Napoleon's toasting glass worth nearly £5,000, a landscape painting by the artist Alfred Munnings, valued at £20,000-30,000, and a silver steeple cup dating back to 1619 and worth up to £60,000.

Series editor Simon Shaw says: "As a television producer, it's a scary prospect when we turn up for a day's filming and have no knowledge of what might turn up."

"I often look at the queue first thing and say a quiet prayer that there really are interesting pieces in all those bags. Amazingly we still keep finding fascinating pieces – and some of the best aren't necessarily the most valuable."

ON TV: Fiona Bruce and the Antiques Roadshow team will be at Chatham's dockyard on Thursday

The show says it is expecting visitors from across the south east to attend the show.

During the shooting of one episode, a couple flew in all the way from New Zealand to reveal a brooch – only for them to be told its value did not match the cost of the air tickets.

Meanwhile, it is not too late for large items to be valued.

A spokesman explained: "Last time we were at Rochester there was also a mahogany sideboard found in a junk shop and worth £2,500 and a TV cabinet bought from Harrods in 1936.

"Both of these would have been brought in on the roadshow's furniture round.

"Back in the office the team are compiling a folder containing letters and emails from people in the area with furniture and large items too big to carry. Items in the past have included paintings, large pots, bedsteads and even a military cannon.

"In the days before the show, two of the team will arrive in the area with the folder and visit as many of the people who have contacted the show as possible.

"Some of these people will have their items transported to the roadshow by the team and a few lucky ones may even end up being filmed on the day."

If you have a large item you would like valued, send details and photographs of the objects to: Antiques Roadshow, BBC, Whiteladies Road, Bristol BS8 2LR, or send an e-mail to antiques.roadshow@bbc.co.uk with the information.

CRASH

Westwood Cross death

AN INVESTIGATION into how a man died after a crash in the car park of the Westwood Cross shopping complex in Broadstairs has been launched by police.

The man, thought to be in his 60s, had been unwell before the car he was driving at low speed hit a parked vehicle at 9.45am on Monday. He was rushed to hospital but died soon after.

CRIME

Rock thrown at car

MOTORISTS are being warned to be on the lookout after a rock was hurled at a car in Thames Way, Gravesend, leaving the woman behind the wheel shaken.

PC Andy Owen said: "I would urge parents to speak to their children so they are aware how dangerous it is, and the consequences of being arrested and dealt with for criminal offences."

FIRE

Haystack inferno

SIX fire engines and dozens of fire fighters spent hours tackling 250 tonnes of baled straw which had caught alight in Wainscott last Sunday.

Crews were called to Islingham Farm Road at 9pm on Sunday to battle the flames and were still at the scene dampening down by 9am the following morning.

It is not known what caused the blaze.

GOLDEN GREATS:

Olympic gold medallists Jessica Ennis and Mo Farah's success at the London 2012 Games has inspired more people to visit sports centres and join clubs in the county

Golden summer triggers burst of interest in county's sport centres

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

EUPHORIA over the Olympic Games – and now the Paralympic Games – has seen the numbers of people using sports facilities across the county rise.

With Team GB storming to success during London 2012 – and the Paralympic GB team set to emulate its success – there has been a rise in those using council-run centres and a big spike in those joining gymnastics clubs.

Gymnastics was one of the surprise success stories for the British competitors, spearheaded by the likes of Louis Smith and Kristian Thomas, as well as Beth Tweddle.

The head coach of East Peckham-based Weald of Kent Gymnastics Club, Jacky Leman, said: "We have seen a massive increase. We're only a small club and I have had 24 new girls and about 10 new boys joining, which is a huge increase. We have had to put on three new classes.

"Typically, we have only had 20 per cent of our membership being boys, but ever since the Team GB boys got their medals, there has been an increase in interest."

Swimming has also seen an increase in numbers with pools across the county seeing an upturn.

Active Life, which runs the council-owned facilities in Canterbury, Whitstable and Herne Bay, says it has enjoyed the benefits of a glorious summer of sport.

Marketing manager Nigel Collins said: "We have been much busier this year compared to last and the weather and the Olympics have helped.

"We did an open day at our centres for people to try out our facilities free of charge and that was very popular.

"I would say overall it is very positive and it's got to have had a good effect. It got the country inspired and people will vote with their feet."

But not all areas have seen an upturn. Leisure contracts manager at Tonbridge &

Malling Borough Council, Martin Guyton, said: "It is too soon to tell whether the Olympics has had a lasting effect on visitor numbers to our leisure facilities.

"It is pleasing to see that, following such an inspiring sporting event as the Olympics, the general trend is upwards, however this could be attributable to a number of factors, including the recent warm weather and marketing campaigns undertaken to promote the facilities, and not just the Olympics."

And, despite the triumphs of our cyclists, dedicated clubs say they have not seen a surge in members despite the number of cyclists on our roads rocketing.

Hugh Roach, secretary of Gravesend Cyclists' Touring Club, said: "We've had no new members than a normal summer when the weather improves, so I'm not sure it has filtered through yet.

"We find that people think about it for a little while first and then so many other factors come in, like the weather. There's certainly generally a lot more interest in cycling and obviously that'll spin off over time."

CRIME

OAP kicked in the head by thug during attack

AN ELDERLY man was left seriously injured after a vicious thug pushed him to the ground and kicked him in the face in an attempted robbery.

The 70-year-old victim was returning to his car in Broadhurst Drive, in Kennington, Ashford, at around 8.30pm on Tuesday, August 21, when he was approached from behind and a demand for money was made.

The pensioner then felt a blow to the back of his head and he fell over. He was kicked several times in the face and head before the offender ran off towards Faversham Road.

He was left with a serious eye injury.

Detective Constable Heather Moore said: "We are appealing for any information or witnesses.

"Maybe they did not see the attempted robbery, but perhaps they saw a man running away near the junction of Broadhurst Drive and Faversham Road."

Anyone with information should contact DC Moore at Kent Police on 101, giving reference ZY/23499/12 or Crimestoppers on 0800 555 111.

MEMORABILIA

Auctioneers prepared for sale of rare football items

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

A HOST of top football memorabilia, including a signed programme by legendary Manchester United manager Sir Matt Busby and a souvenir edition of the Evening Standard celebrating the 1996 World Cup win, are among a host of items going under the hammer this month.

They form part of a collection up for sale at Grand Auctions in Folkestone.

Included is a ticket stub for what was once dubbed "the match of the century" when Billy Wright's England team of 1953 were given a rude awakening by an inspirational Hungary side featuring the likes of Ferenc Puskás.

Hungary's 6-3 victory forced a radical shake-up in the way England coached its footballers.

Other tickets include those for the 1956 friendly against Brazil.

Fans can also bid for a 1983 Milk Cup final programme signed by Sir Matt Busby, together with a menu and seating plan for special guests on the day.

Jonathan Riley, from the auctioneers, said: "Sir Matt Busby created the Manchester United legend and aura of attacking football. This final was one of the few occasions the team achieved anything much in the dark days before the arrival of Alex Ferguson."

The auction will be held on Wednesday, September 19 at 6pm in the Folkestone Enterprise Centre, Shearway Business Park.

COMMUNITY

Pledge to buy back fire stations for the benefit of communities

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

COMMUNITIES across Kent were dealt a devastating blow earlier this year when village fire stations were forced to close as part of cutbacks.

But now a flurry of parish councils are rushing to buy the buildings to use to benefit their towns or villages.

The latest council to make the move is Rusthall, near Tunbridge Wells, which has plans of turning its station into council offices and a youth centre.

Rusthall will join St Margarets, near Dover; Brenchley and Matfield council, near Tunbridge Wells; Halling, near Rochester; and Sturry, near Canterbury, all of which have expressed interest in buying their stations.

Kent Fire and Rescue Service (KFRS) has offered the unused buildings to the councils – if they can raise the funds to buy them.

Rusthall Parish Council now has six months to find the £100,000 needed to purchase the station on Lower Green Road.

Parish chairman Jenny Blackburn said the chance to buy the station is a “once in a lifetime opportunity” but the funds will be hard to find.

She said: “We want to have a place in the heart of the village, that is visible and not in a church hall.

“We also only have one youth club in the village but it is very small and does not provide a lot of services for children. This is a large village of 6,000 people. We really need to be providing more for secondary school children, so that they have got somewhere to go, to be with their friends, in a safe environment.”

The council is hoping a government grant will provide the cash, but they won't know until they discuss it further in a meeting later this month.

Although the village is supporting

FOR SALE: Transforming key fire sites into valuable community facilities is a hit the youth centre idea, the council is still keen to hear from residents on how they think the space should be used.

Across Kent, the parish councils are using the Localism Act's right to bid for community assets to secure their village's future.

Ms Blackburn said: “Not a lot of buildings are going to become available. It's a great opportunity for communities to acquire these buildings.”

Halling council fought long and hard to save their station and were devastated when they heard it would be closed.

Council chair and ex-fireman Daryl Palmer said: “The station has been here for 107 years, it is a massive part of village life. It was real wrench when it was closed down.”

The council has plans to use the building for council officers and possibly a small museum as well as considering it for a police or fire safety drop in.

Council clerk Trudi Smith said: “We would give it back to the village. It is a big part of this area. It is the heart of the community.”

The councils are hoping to secure the buildings or they may be sold off and become housing.

KFRS director of service delivery, Steve Griffiths, said: “We are pleased we have been able to work with parish councils and communities to develop additional facilities. We do have a duty to achieve best value and we have taken that into account when setting the disposal values.”

TELEVISION

Hotel Inspector's return

TV'S self-styled hard-nosed Hotel Inspector, Alex Polizzi, was seen paying a return trip to the county this week as she again locked horns with a Margate hotel owner.

And despite admitting Ms Polizzi reduced her to tears on screen, the owner of the Walpole Bay Hotel had nothing but praise for the businesswoman, who has developed a reputation for putting failing businesses back on the right track.

Jane Bishop was featured on the Hotel Inspector: Revisited, shown on Channel 5 this week.

The 61-year-old said: “Off camera, she's wonderful. But when the cameras go on she is a total professional, it's sometimes hurtful.”

Tears and showdowns were shown on our screens last Thursday when the pair conflicted about the direction of the hotel and the artefacts contained within the hotel's museum. Ms Polizzi had originally tried to get Mrs Bishop to close the museum to focus on her business, but after the first programme, hundreds of viewers sent in more things to go with the Walpole Bay Hotel's collection.

Mrs Bishop added: “You wouldn't believe the publicity – it's world-wide. We've had three years of publicity and it's been repeated in Europe 20 times.”

“We're not business people and we're not pretending to be. We're living our dream of restoring this building. We've never had any formal training so it was most helpful on the business side of things, but her concept of the overall hotel and mine are worlds apart.”

HISTORY

Book celebrates bravery of our Victoria Cross winners

By Chrissie Daniels

chrissie.daniels@archant.co.uk

TEN brave heroes, awarded the highest military accolade, the Victoria Cross, have been honoured in a new book.

The book, Ten Brave Men and True, is written by Richard Snow, and explores the life and deaths of the men, who all have links to the borough of Tunbridge Wells.

Retired Mr Snow has spent the past five years painstakingly researching and writing their stories to create the finished product, of which all profits will be donated to charity Help for Heroes.

The book focuses on the lives of the men, both before and after they received their Victoria Cross (VC) for bravery or 'valour in the face of the enemy'.

The award was created by Queen Victoria and only 1,356 have been given since 1856.

All ten of the men in the book were born, lived, or died in the borough of Tunbridge Wells.

The book is especially poignant as the first ever VC was awarded to one of the men featured – Charles Lucas, who is buried in Mereworth, near Maidstone.

Rear Admiral Lucas was given the honour when a shell landed on the deck of the boat he was on, Hecla, in 1854 during the Crimean War.

Mr Snow said: "Everyone else panicked but he coolly picked it up and threw it overboard. It went bang as it hit the water and he saved the ship."

Lucas later lived in Culverden House, Tunbridge Wells,

INSPIRATION: John Brunt

where the old Kent & Sussex hospital now stands.

Mr Snow said Lucas later lost his medal on a train to Scotland and had to be issued with a replica one.

The book is the author's second title, the first, All for Valour, focused on the story of John Brunt VC, who also features in the new publication.

Mr Snow said: "The idea for the book came when I was shopping in Waitrose in Pad-dock Wood and saw a pub called John Brunt VC."

To research Captain Brunt, Mr Snow interviewed 30 people he went to school with who described him as a "daredevil".

Brunt set his sights on the VC after he was awarded the Military Cross.

He gained the VC for fighting off German enemies during the Second World War. Brunt sadly died the day after his act of bravery, aged just 22, and never knew he was awarded the honour.

The full list of men commemorated in the book are: Rear Admiral Charles Lucas, Major General Matthew Dixon, Lieutenant Colonel William Temple, Lieutenant John Grant, Captain Douglas Belcher, Rev William Addison, Acting Captain Eric Dougall, Lieutenant Colonel William Clark-Kennedy, Captain Lionel Queripel and Captain John Brunt.

Mr Snow managed to get a member of each of their families to write a foreword and donate pictures to the book.

Mr Snow, who was fundraising director for Hospice in the Weald before he retired said: "The book shows the people behind the VC and is full of local links. I have sold lots of copies so far, it's fantastic."

"The men are absolutely fascinating. They are great, brave people with great stories. It is unusual to have ten VCs in one town. I think it is really quite an honour for the borough."

The author has got his nephew, TV historian Dan Snow, to write the foreword. His cousin is Channel 4 news presenter Jon Snow.

Mr Snow said: "It is marvelous the money is going to Help for Heroes. It is very apt – I just wanted to make some money for a very worthy charity."

The costs of getting the book on the shelves were met by sponsors – Denise Barnes, Cripps Harries Hall, Knight Frank Estate Agents and Alex King, deputy leader of Kent County Council.

AWARDED: Charles Lucas was awarded with the first ever VC for his swift action to save the lives of those on a boat struck by a shell during the Crimean War

AWARDS

Stylist snips his way to awards

A HAIRDRESSER is out to prove he is a cut above the rest after being shortlisted for a prestigious title at a national awards ceremony.

The two-time former finalist said he was chuffed by his inclusion in the final six and it capped a good year for him professionally.

He said: "I was delighted when I received my letter telling me I had made it to the finals."

"To be recognised by your peers as being one of the country's leading hairdressers and being involved in the British Hairdressing Awards is a wonderful feeling and a great achievement."

Mr Russell will find out if he's done enough to claim the prize at a glitzy awards ceremony in London on November 26.

Photos of his hair designs, which are inspired by the work of designers such as Vivienne Westwood and Alexander McQueen, will be reviewed by leading hairdressers and industry journalists.

Publishing director of Hairdressers Journal International, Jayne Lewis-Orr, said: "Each year the entries in all categories push the boundaries and are truly inspirational. British hairdressing is perceived throughout the world as being the best, and these awards recognise and reward creativity and excellence in all hairdressing skills."

Mr Russell is Kent's sole representative among the nominations.

ENVIRONMENT

Have your say on the path to stretch along our famous coastline

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A PUBLIC consultation has started into plans for Kent's first stretch of unbroken coastal trail.

The Ramsgate to Folkestone route will form part of the English coastal path – a continuous stretch around the entire country's coastline, aimed at providing improved access for walkers and boosting tourism.

Once completed, people will be able to walk uninterrupted around England's picturesque coastline.

The proposed route for the first Kent stretch, a 37-mile trail from Ramsgate to Folkestone, will run close to the towns of Sandwich, Deal and Dover and pass through a variety of coastal habitats and cliff scenery.

The following stretch, likely to be completed over the next five years, will run the remainder of the Thanet coastline and along the north Kent coast through seaside towns such as Herne Bay and Whitstable, and then on to Swale, Medway and the Thames Estuary near Gravesend and Dartford.

Natural England – the Government's independent advisor on the natural environment – and Kent County Council have met landowners to 'walk the course' for where the new route could go between Ramsgate and Folkestone.

A series of drop-in sessions are being held this month for people to view and discuss maps. They will run from noon to 5.45pm at Dover library on September 18, Deal library on September 19 and Ramsgate library on September 27.

The Natural England consultation runs until Friday, November 9.

KCC cabinet member for customer and communities, Cllr Mike Hill, said the new national trail will help show off the very best of Kent's historic and natural coastline.

He added: "When complete, the route will deliver significant social and economic benefits to our coastal communities and be a great recreational resource for the people of Kent."

"These consultation events are a great opportunity for the wider public to have input into the proposals, we urge residents and landowners to have their say on this potentially great asset to our county."

Over the next 10 weeks, organisations, farmers, residents, visitors and businesses are being invited to have their say as part of the consultation.

Area manager for Natural England, James Seymour, said: "It's important that all responses are taken into account and we look forward to hearing people's views."

"We have had discussions with landowners and key organisations along the proposed route; their input has been essential and helped shape the draft proposals."

The first stretch of coastal access was approved in Weymouth and opened on June 29, in time for the Olympic sailing.

See www.naturalengland.org.uk for more information and to comment.

GO FOR A WALK: Deal seafront and the White Cliffs of Dover are both a part of the trail set to link up the entire coast

Local funding for local businesses

One way we're helping business get ahead ➤➤

To all local businesses,

As the UK's biggest lender to small businesses, we're committed to making it easy and affordable for businesses to access finance. As part of this commitment, we're making available £2.5bn of funding specifically to support local businesses.

This funding is limited and all loans approved will be fee-free and offered on a first-come, first-served basis. What's more, you could also qualify for a 1% interest rate discount if your loan is for five years or less.

This is among the most affordable funding we've been able to offer small to medium size businesses for some time and will hopefully encourage more businesses to take the opportunity to invest in growth.

All of our Relationship Managers, with local knowledge and expertise, are ready to discuss your business' funding requirements with you – to ensure you get the right option for your business.

GAMBLING

Do you have winning lottery ticket?

THE search is on to find the winner of a £73,263 National Lottery prize after they failed to claim their cash windfall.

It is thought the winner may have gone on holiday and forgotten to check their ticket.

The ticket had matched five numbers and the bonus ball in the Lotto draw on Saturday, August 11.

While organisers are not revealing where exactly the ticket was bought, it is known to be from the Ashford area.

The winning Lotto numbers on that date were 1, 5, 14, 18, 34, 44 and the bonus ball was 23.

The lucky ticket-holder has until Thursday, February 7, to claim their prize. If no-one comes forward with the winning ticket before the prize claim deadline, then the money, plus all the interest it has generated, will go to the National Lottery Good Causes.

A National Lottery spokesperson said: "We're desperate to find this mystery ticket-holder and unite them with their winnings – this amazing prize could really make a huge difference to somebody's life. We're urging everyone to check their old tickets again or look anywhere a missing ticket could be hiding."

"Try checking in the pockets of clothing, in wallets, bags and down the back of the sofa – someone out there could literally be sitting on a fortune. We have the Champagne on ice and our fingers crossed that the lucky winner comes forward to claim their win."

Anyone who believes they have the winning ticket for any of the National Lottery draws within the 180-day deadline should call the National Lottery Line on 0845 910 0000.

FUNDRAISING

Take a leap of faith with a 10,000ft skydive for charity

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

TWIDDLING your thumbs and pondering how you could make your life a little bit more exciting? Then how about hurling yourself out of an airplane 10,000ft above the Kent countryside?

It may not be everyone's cup of tea, but thrillseekers or those simply wanting to challenge themselves have the chance to leap out of their comfort zone when a special charity skydive takes place next month.

Held as part of a series of similar events taking place around the UK, Headcorn Aerodrome will fly fundraisers into the skies on October 28 before letting them jump out, attached to their instructor.

Those taking part will find themselves tumbling at speeds of up to 120mph, before a parachute carries them gently back to Earth.

It is already proving a big success, with a date previously arranged for October 7 now

CHALLENGE: Tandem skydivers can support children's charity fully booked.

All those taking part will be raising money for the Children's Trust, a national charity which provides specialist care for children with complex health needs.

It also runs the UK's largest residential rehabilitation centre for acquired brain injury.

A spokesman said: "A deposit of £60 is required and we ask for a minimum sponsorship amount of £450.

"If you reach the target of £450 you will be refunded your deposit, making your tandem jump from 10,000ft free.

"All equipment will be supplied on the day."

To register, or to find out more, contact Anna Baldwin on 01245 422554 or visit www.thechildrenstrust.org.uk/skydive to download a registration form.

SAFETY

'Baywatch' steps up as RNLI team make a splash on our busy beaches

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

IT'S been a summer of extremes, from almost non-stop torrential rain to a scorching heat wave.

But in true British spirit people have packed their bucket and spades and continued to hit the beach.

And whether rain or shine, the new team of RNLI lifeguards in Thanet have been there every day to make sure the thousands of beachgoers stay safe.

With more people going in the water and the recent tragedies in other parts of the UK, including the deaths of four in a canoeing accident in Scotland this week and a four-year-old boy who fell in the sea in Somerset last month, lifeguards are becoming a vital part of the beach scene.

Kent's highly-trained lifesavers have been patrolling 10 of the county's most popular beaches, located on the Thanet coastline.

In previous years the service was run by Thanet Leisure Force, but the lifeboat charity took over in May to create a seamless rescue service from beach to open sea.

Undergoing intensive training before the summer season started, including fitness, rescue skills and casualty care, every member of the team had to prove their worth before being taken on and awarded their internationally recognised lifeguard certificate, which also gives them the added responsibility of being ambulance co-responders.

This means being called upon to respond to emergencies within 400 metres of their patrol zone to provide vital assessment and treatment before the arrival of paramedics.

Extensive first aid kits, including defibrillators, oxygen therapy and spinal boards are at every beach unit.

"They go through an intense training period in casualty care, competency, fitness, running, swimming and other vital training," said lifeguard manager Rory Smith.

"They are co-responders to the South East Coast Ambulance service so if, for example, someone is having a heart attack in the beach car park they would be first on scene to tend to them while the ambulance is on its way.

"Having this status offers enhanced protection to people in the vicinity of our beach patrols."

Through the summer, the lifeguards have dealt with a variety of first aid incidents, from near drownings to heat exhaustion, to cuts, bruises and more serious injuries, including a dislocated shoulder.

They were also on hand to offer advice to beachgoers.

"Ninety-five per cent of lifeguarding work is educating beach users," said Mr Smith.

"The lifeguards offer advice to members of the public to stop them getting into trouble. We've had a good response from people. I've got a really good lifeguarding team here."

The RNLI charity worked with Thanet District Council, which pays the lifesavers, to get the new lifeguard service in place.

They work closely alongside the charity's lifeboat crews.

The RNLI has been rolling out its lifeguarding scheme countrywide with 180 beaches now patrolled.

Cabinet member for tourism at Thanet council, Iris Johnson, said she was pleased with the new service.

"We're so proud of our beautiful beaches and are thrilled that this new five-year contract will help to enhance lifeguard provision around our coast," she said.

The lifeguards patrol from 10am-6pm, seven days a week through the summer until September.

CONTEST

Custard pie contest attracts the stars as it returns 'home'

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

IT has its roots firmly in the county's history, and has been a source of entertainment since the days of silent movies.

And now the humble custard pie is being thrown back into the limelight as the county once again plays host to the official championships.

The World Custard Pie Championship has been held in Coxheath, near Maidstone, since 1967.

Drawing its inspiration from the likes of Charlie Chaplin, organisers are expecting teams from around the world to descend on the village, with a sprinkling of celebrities taking part this year too.

Rory McGrath and Will Mellor will both be participating in the contest, joined by camera crews from Channel 5, shooting their exploits for new TV show Rory and Will's Champions of the World.

An event spokesman said: "The championships were originated by Cllr Mike FitzGerald to raise funds for the village hall. It continued for many years before disbanding and returning in 2007. We're delighted it's back in Maidstone and proud we've inspired similar events around the world.

"Will and Rory are on the hunt for global recognition and have set out to be champions of the world. They realise this cannot be achieved unless they can become the World Custard Pie champions.

"We are restricting entries

THE RULES

■ Each team member has five custard pies in the first round, seven in the semi-final and a maximum of ten in the final, all of which they must hurl at their opponents.

■ Points are scored for accuracy of throw: Hit in the face – six points; Near miss, shoulder height or upwards – three points; Body hit – one point; Two consecutive misses – minus one.

■ Judges can award up to five points for amusing and original throwing techniques.

this year to the first 16 teams.

"Rory and Will will join a team so if anyone is interested they should get in touch."

HERITAGE

Beaneys back to its best after a £14m overhaul

By Dean Kilpatrick

dean.kilpatrick@archant.co.uk

IT is one of Canterbury's most breathtaking public buildings.

Yet for the past three years its ornate exterior has been covered up as a massive £14 million refurbishment programme transformed it. And on Wednesday it will be unveiled to the public for the first time.

The Beaneys, as it is affectionately known, has long housed the city's main library in addition to museum and exhibition space in its central position on the pedestrianised High Street.

But three years ago its doors shut as city officials unleashed an extensive renovation on the site in order to bring it into the 21st century, while retaining the splendour of a building constructed in 1897.

Among the work taking place was the replacement of woodwork on the exterior that had been damaged by the death-watch beetle, as well as re-carving one of the pair of griffins which guard the main entrance.

But it is inside where the work is most obvious. Ceilings have been restored, flooring repaired and partitions removed.

It will house a new and extended library, exhibition galleries, education facilities and a programme of events designed to appeal to all age groups. Exhibits will include antiques from Egypt and ancient Greece, along with other Anglo-Saxon finds from archaeological digs.

Along with the completion and opening of the new Marlowe Theatre, the city council says it underlines a commitment to culture within the city.

Head of culture and enterprise, at the city council, Janice McGuinness, said: "Culture runs through the veins of a city like Canterbury and is a key part of its identity. Its reputation was built on heritage but it's now about contemporary culture too."

"The Beaneys is a perfect blend of both, with its striking new extension and beautifully restored facade and interior of the original building."

The centre will also feature art pieces, including work from Canterbury's most famous artist Thomas Sidney Cooper.

The building takes its name from its benefactor, Dr James George Beaneys, who died in 1891 and left money in his will to the city of Canterbury. Previously known as the Beaneys Institute, it will now be known as the Beaneys House of Art and Knowledge.

To celebrate the opening, visitors can enjoy live music, workshops and tours next weekend, September 8-9.

Also taking place is the Wise Words Festival, which aims to bring communities, authors, poets, dancers, and performance artists together.

The Beaneys refurbishment project was funded by Canterbury City Council and Kent County Council and also received £7m from the Heritage Lottery Fund.

CYCLING

Pedalling an unusual line in art

PEDAL power has inspired what council chiefs have dubbed "an iconic art installation" on the roof above Gravesend's council offices.

Painted in bright green, the recycled bikes are part of a series of works commissioned by Kent County Council to celebrate the county hosting the Paralympic Games at Brands Hatch.

They have been installed across Kent and will be on site until the end of September.

More than 150 people attended a two-day workshop held at the Cyclopark in Gravesham in July to work with the reCyculture team to create art from disused bikes.

The team also collected a wealth of stories, thoughts and ideas about bikes and cycling from those who attended, which has been made into poems, films, audio tracks and web pages, to form the virtual aspect of the installations.

And those above Gravesham Borough Council's Civic Centre have already started catching the attention of passers-by.

Tanmanjeet Singh Dhesi, the council's lead member, business and partnerships, said "We are very excited to be part of this, especially in view of Gravesham's proximity to Brands Hatch and the Paralympic cycling events held there.

"The reCyculture project involves the whole community, whether they take part in one of the workshops, cycle themselves, or just take in the spectacle as they go about their business."

See www.recyculture.co.uk for more details about the project.

KENT REMEMBERED

SMOKING: The Rochester Sweeps Festival, which parades through the town, dates back 100 years

Festivals keeping alive county's rich folklore

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

ENGLAND enjoys a rich tradition of folk festivals and beliefs – possibly more than any other country.

Many of these can be traced back many hundreds, or even thousands, of years and often their actual origins are shrouded in mystery.

Despite that, many are still observed, in one form or another, even in the 21st century.

Yesterday's Country Customs: A History of Traditional English Folklore by Henry Buckton delves into the world of mummers, tree dressers, beaters of the bounds and cheese rollers as well as looking into festivals and traditional games and gatherings.

Published by The History Press the work examines some of the events and beliefs which give Kent its unique place in this country's folklore.

Mr Buckton said: "In some ways they are a living semblance of the nation's history.

"They stem from every phase of our antiquity and embody all the peoples who have traditionally enriched our culture, from the Celts to the Hanoverians.

"They encapsulate into the nation's popular psyche some of the greatest moments from our past, and celebrate best-loved heroes or infamous villains."

A Jack in the Green – as immortalised in song by Jethro Tull – was once a key component of May Day parades up and down the country.

The Jack itself is described as "a large framework structure swathed in lush green foliage and spring flowers, which is sometimes surmounted by an elaborate floral crown and then worn or carried by a person – who is completely hidden by the leaves and has their face painted green".

The purpose – as far as anyone can ascertain – was to suggest that a bush or small tree had become sentient.

Its origins are unclear and although the Jack sounds vaguely pagan it may be less than 500-years-old and have its origins in spring parades by milkmaids which often featured flowers.

Kent has a couple of Jacks which make their appearance on the first day of May.

In 1976, one was created for the Whitstable Folk Festival and now it is escorted from the Duke of Cumberland pub by a procession of dancers as it makes its way to the harbour.

A larger event takes place in Medway over the May Bank Holiday weekend.

The Rochester Sweeps Festival traditionally commemorates the one day each year sweeps could spend away from brushes, chimneys and soot.

Dating back more than a 100 years it used to feature a parade through the city and also included a Jack.

But the passing of the Climbing Boys Act – which regulated child labour – meant the whole chimney-sweeping business changed and the festival went into decline.

The last one was held in 1900 prior to its revival in 1981.

The Jack itself came back two years later with the organisers drawing on accounts by Charles Dickens, who witnessed the original events.

On May Day morning the Jack is 'woken up' at dawn by dancers and sweeps on the slopes of Blue Bell Hill – as is recorded in contemporary 19th century accounts.

It then takes part in a parade on Monday, starting in the grounds of Rochester Castle.

Writing the introduction to the book Robert McDowall, president of The Folklore Society, says: "All publications that stimulate interest in English customs past and present are welcome because they stimulate the public interest in folklore. Yesterday's Country Customs is an important contribution to maintaining the general public's awareness of the importance of country customs to folklore and folklore traditions in England."

OPINION

Take a healthy interest in NHS

David Griffiths explains why it's so important that the community gets involved in the running of the county's new foundation trusts

THERE is no subject more important to us than health; our own, our friends' and families' and that of our communities.

And as a nation we are proud and protective of the organisation which helps us to look after our health, the NHS. The fantastic section of the Olympics opening ceremony involving NHS staff and patients demonstrated that pride very well.

The NHS has moved a long way from "doctor knows best", with patients having little say in their healthcare. Patients are more at the forefront of deciding what is best for them and there is also greater choice. And it is not just individual patients having more say in their own individual care – local people are increasingly having more involvement in what services are provided and how they are delivered.

To drive forward the involvement of communities, the government has directed that all

NHS trusts should become foundation trusts. They will still be NHS organisations, employing NHS staff. However, they will have greater freedom to meet local needs and will be held to account by local people who become trust members.

This is an exciting and important time for Kent Community Health NHS Trust. We deliver the majority of NHS care people receive in their own homes and in community settings right across the county.

We employ 5,400 staff including doctors, community nurses, health visitors, physiotherapists and a range of health professionals. We are responsible for the 12 community hospitals around the county, which are very dear to the hearts of our communities. We spend £213m of public money to provide NHS care to you, your family and community.

We have been given the go ahead to consult with the public on our plans to become a foundation trust and to start recruiting people to be members. We aim to have an average of at least 500 members in each of our 12 council districts initially and eventually many more. These members will be eligible to vote for a council of governors from among themselves who will hold the trust's board to account.

Of course the amount of time members will spend being involved with us will vary. They could receive regular information about the trust, or they could take part in consultations. They could get more involved and become members of focus groups, for example, or even stand for election as a governor. The choice is theirs.

The most important thing is that as many people as possible, from all communities and backgrounds, become members. The more people who are involved at a local level, the

The more people who are involved, the more we will be able to develop health services more we will be able to develop and design health services to meet the community's needs.

I invite everyone to attend one of our 12 public meetings being held during September and October. One will be held in each of the 12 district or borough council areas, so there will be one near where you live. The first meeting takes place at Fleetdown Community Centre, Swaledale Road, Dartford, on September 5, from 2-4pm.

All the meetings will be advertised in this paper and are also at www.kentcht.nhs.uk/foundationtrust along with details about how to take part in our public consultation and sign up to become a member. Or call the trust membership office on 01622 211970 for more details.

The consultation runs until Monday, October 22, 2012.

KOS COMMENT

Uniform demands are too much right now

THERE is nothing more sobering for parents, nothing more likely to see the euphoria of a holiday wiped away, than going shopping for a school uniform.

Not only does it involve a scrum in a bid to find those elusive trousers or jumper in the right shade of grey, but when you return home with bulging shopping bags you realise you've spent about the equivalent of that week you've just enjoyed in Majorca.

Good, then, that there is pressure from the Citizen's Advice Bureau for schools not to strike exclusive deals with certain stores and expect parents to pay through the nose. Yes, insist on the highest level of smartness and presentation. Just don't insist parents are forced to pay a fortune to do so.

All hail our Herman

HOME baking is often perceived as the preserve of those with a strong grasp on culinary skills and the patience of a saint.

The Herman friendship cake craze may just change that. We at KOS have already become hooked. We think many more will fall under Herman's spell too over the coming months.

History could repeat itself

I HOPE the 3,000 people that signed support for a heritage theme park in Margate are going to go every couple of weeks – because it will fail if not.

Youngsters want state-of-the-art rides, not junk bought from failed theme parks.

An historical theme park next to a modern theme park might work. I hope it's successful because Margate needs something badly.

Adrian Ottley, Birchington

Manston's on wrong path

ONCE Manston has been established as London's overspill airport, how long before it becomes London's de facto main airport?

It has long been claimed that night flights are essential for Manston's survival, so the pretence of the odd late running arrival is laughable.

You only have to look at the 'Why Not Manston' website to see how spurious the figures are. Once the precedence has been set, it's 'chicks away'.

A couple more runways, an aeroplane overhead every 90 seconds, 24 hours a day, massive increase in pollution, 60-mile of queues of traffic to/from London. Just think of the unnecessary 'airport miles' because of Manston's location on the wrong side of London.

Now if it were 60-odd miles north or west that would be a different matter.

Bill Stevens, Faversham

Get your facts right first, sir

HERE in Ramsgate we are used to various politicians and developers trying to tell us we should welcome aeroplanes thundering over our heads all through the night.

These range from some that are genuinely concerned Manston airport could create much-needed employment in the area; those that think no further than wanting a cheap and convenient base for their annual holiday flight; and the misguided and ill-informed like the leader of Kent Conservatives who famously forgot Ramsgate when he claimed there was nothing between Manston and the sea.

I'm afraid that Nicholas Reed, who you gave space to last week, appears to fall firmly in the latter category.

Manston has had at least two commercial operators – Wiggins and Infratil – with worldwide experience of airport operation.

Both operators took on the airport knowing there was an existing ban on night-time flying, with partial relaxation for passenger flights from Europe and to America.

Neither of these managed to attract a major passenger airline for any length of time. Infratil currently have the airport up for sale.

Two airline operators have attempted to run commercial passenger flights from Manston, both using different strategies and both heavily subsidised by the airport.

EUjet ran flights to many European destinations which was great while it lasted, but sadly failed in bankruptcy.

Flybe was more selective in its chosen routes, but once again failed after a few months, quoting Manston's poor catchment area rather than lack of night flights as the reason.

So we are left with the possibility of freight flights, taking the sort of traffic that the other bigger airports reject. Inflicting loss of sleep for many for the sake of importing fruit and veg from Africa and the Middle East seems much less attractive; much less attractive because so little local employment would be created.

The best evidence of likely job creation comes from Kent County Council's bid for multiple millions from the Regional Growth Fund. The bid was to improve rail links, create a Manston station and subsidise a daily feeder flight to Schiphol airport in Amsterdam, all to create an estimated less than 30 jobs.

Needless to say, the Government rejected the bid – apart from welcome rail improvements cutting the journey time to Ramsgate.

So, we have an airport struggling to find a niche market, that even if successful would devastate Ramsgate and the far more secure prospect of jobs from the visitor economy.

If only people like Mr Reed would study the brutal economic facts rather than wishful thinking.

parking). So Mark Devlin is now saying that those patients on income support, jobseekers allowance and pension credit will now get subsidised parking? When did this come in?

I, for one, have never heard of this before. This is a sop to justify the full charge for Blue Badge holders.

Further, I venture to suggest that this group of patients are the least likely to have a motor vehicle in the first place.

Limit to what is expected

I AGREED with your correspondent that the imposition of a 50mph speed limit on the road near Yalding is inappropriate, but for completely different reasons and with great concern at the apparent misunderstanding from a driver.

The letter reads as if 50mph is an increase on the previous limit when it is, of course, a reduction from the national limit for single track roads of 60mph.

If the imposition of a speed limit is widely perceived to indicate that a road has been officially assessed as safe at that speed then it is counter-productive in achieving its presumed intention of improving road safety.

The appropriate speed for country roads varies rapidly from stretch to stretch and a corner where only 20mph or less is sensible can be followed by a straight open road where 60mph is not inappropriate.

To impose a limit of 40 or 50 to cover both is pointless.

If the corner is difficult to judge then it should have a triangle warning sign with an advisory speed limit below.

An artificially low limit on the straight is likely to be ignored where there is no visible reason for it and encourage non-compliance with limits when they really are sensible.

All these limits do is dupe people into thinking the road is suddenly safer and allow officials to claim they are doing something about road safety.

I am not a member of any transport lobby, just an ordinary car driver who understands that speed limits do not make bad drivers good drivers, but can make good drivers illegal drivers.

Leave the speed limits alone.

Lenders box clever with fixed rate mortgages

Q WE HAVE been looking into getting a fixed-rate mortgage while interest rates are so low, but all we can find are loans that last for just two or three years and then go onto a higher variable rate.

Do you know of any fixed-rate mortgages that last longer?

A MORTGAGE lenders think the same as you – that interest rates will eventually rise.

This is why you want a long-term loan at a rate fixed now, and for exactly the same reason, lenders will not offer more than a few years at today's rates.

The best I can find for you is a mortgage with a rate fixed until 2017.

There are three big lenders that go this far – Nationwide, HSBC and Natwest. But they all have drawbacks.

Nationwide will advance up to 70pc, but the interest rate is 3.39pc.

HSBC's rate is lower at 2.99pc, but it will lend only up to 60pc.

Natwest charges 2.95pc and also lends only up to 60pc maximum, and the arrangement fee is a huge £2,495.

Q A FRIEND died some years ago who had promised to leave me something in his will.

I have received nothing and each time I raise the matter with the solicitors and executors I am told that the will has "not gone to probate yet".

A NOT everyone makes a will. Lots of people do not leave enough to make a will worthwhile or they decide that if they die intestate – without a will – then their family will receive everything anyway, so they do not bother.

If you are sure your friend left a will, then according to the Courts Service: "You should normally expect to find the probate record within the first year or two after the date of death, and if you have not found it within three years, you can usually assume that probate was not necessary."

When an application for probate is made, the will is held by the Probate Registry and is available for public inspection. So, despite what you have been told, your next move should be to check whether an application has been made. Call the Probate Registry Postal Searches Department on 0113 389 6133 for details; there is a small cost for this.

If a search produces nothing, instruct a solicitor to contact the solicitors who are administering the estate.

As a possible beneficiary, you have the right to know where you stand.

Q MY previous employer and I paid into a Santander pension plan for me, but since 2005 I have worked for an employer with its own pension scheme.

TONY HETHERINGTON

I still have £28,000 sitting in the Santander plan, earning about £50 annual interest.

Santander says my money can be transferred out to another pension fund, and a financial adviser quoted fees of £1,000 a year for managing it. What do you advise?

A HAVE you asked your current employer whether the £28,000 could be accepted as a top-up payment into its pension fund?

This would be the simplest option.

If this is not possible, consider starting a self-invested personal pension (Sipp).

Low-cost Sipp managers include Hargreaves Lansdown (0117 980 9926) and Sippdeal (sippdeal.co.uk). They let you decide where your money is invested, whether it is in shares, a deposit account or something different.

Do not give up, though. A return of £50 on capital of £28,000 is not acceptable.

Q I HAVE a younger sister and an older brother. If our parents leave no will, who inherits their house? Is it my brother, as the eldest?

My brother and I are both married, but our sister lives with our parents. Does this make a difference?

A YOU would inherit in equal shares. Age differences, or living in the house, would not alter your equal rights.

Q OUR daughter is getting married next spring. After the floods and torrential rain seen this year, we want to insure against bad weather forcing a change of plans.

How do we go about this?

A A WEDDING insurance policy can cover your choice of risks, including bad weather or floods that cause a postponement or damage.

Big names in this type of policy include Weddingplan (0844 412 3115) and Debenhams (0844 573 5975).

Taking new 'app-roach' to getting car insurance

Your smartphone could soon help you to cut your car insurance premiums. ADAM AIKEN reports...

THE latest breakthrough in the world of car insurance technology is being given a test drive, with safe drivers set to make significant savings on their annual premiums.

Telematics – which until now has involved a 'black box' being fitted to a vehicle – is a form of motor insurance that offers tailor-made premiums based on a driver's individual behaviour. Drivers are rewarded for sticking to the speed limit and how they do things such as corner and accelerate.

The growing popularity of telematics was highlighted recently with the news that Insurethebox – one of the biggest players in the black box market – had sold its 100,000th policy.

But Aviva has now unveiled a new piece of technology that needs only a mobile phone, and which monitors your driving for just 200 miles.

The company says that drivers could save up to 20per cent thanks to this new technology, which is called Rate My Drive and comes in the form of a smartphone application.

After monitoring your driving for 200 miles, it will turn the data into an individual score that will help determine your premiums.

"We believe this innovative use of smartphone technology will benefit all safe drivers, regardless of age or gender," said Aviva retail director Steve Treloar.

"Unlike traditional black box telematics solutions, the Rate My Drive app needs only a small amount of data to create an individual driver profile. And because the app is free to download and uses the customer's own smartphone, there is no need for motorists to have a black box installed in their car."

All drivers who complete the Rate My Drive app trial will be given feedback on their driving as well as a quote.

And for motorists worried that their poor driving will hit them in the pocket, Aviva has pledged that poor scores will not result in their premiums being hiked. Those drivers will simply not be eligible for a discount.

Sharon Flaherty, head of content and social innovation at Confused.com, said the development symbolised the changes within the insurance industry as it sought to take advantage of technological advances.

"When it comes to motoring, although telematics-type devices have existed for years, they are now becoming mainstream due to various factors," she said.

"Rises in car insurance premiums over the past couple of years have

ON THE ROAD TO HI-TECH SOLUTIONS

TELEMATICS has been around for some time, but it has really taken off over the past couple of years.

Whether Aviva's Rate My Drive smartphone application is the next big thing will become clear over the coming months, but there is no doubt telematics is here to stay – news that should be welcomed by safe and reliable drivers.

Insurethebox, a leading provider of black box policies, said its research showed that telematics encouraged better driving and led to cutting the number of accidents involving young motorists by up to 40 per cent. Its findings were based on analysing more than 300 million miles of driving data from its customers.

Insurethebox policies involve drivers buying a fixed number of miles. A black box linked to GPS satellites is installed under the dashboard and monitors the car's movements.

If the vehicle exceeds its allocation, the policyholder can buy additional miles, although that may not be necessary if the motorist has driven well.

Drivers can also win extra miles of insurance based on the safety of their motoring. The data is used to help calculate renewal premiums, with price cuts for the best motorists.

Insurethebox said nearly two thirds of its customers saw their renewal quotes cut by an average of more than 20per cent after a year with the black box provider.

"We are delighted with these results because, apart from enabling cheaper motor insurance, the main benefit to society of telematics is that it should improve driving behaviour," said Insurethebox chief executive Mike Brockman.

"Our data prove conclusively that this is more than just a theory – it really does work."

Sharon Flaherty, at Confused.com, said: "We should expect car manufacturers to make cars with telematics devices as standard."

"Aside from the fact they can give personalised car insurance premiums based on the driver's behaviour – instead of general risk factors such as age, postcode and convictions – telematics double up as trackers so cars can be found if they are stolen. It makes sense that telematics technology will make its way into our lives on a more frequent basis."

meant drivers are seeking alternatives to aid them in cutting motoring costs, prompting the insurance industry to hunt for solutions."

Aviva has been carrying out internal trials over the past few months, and the insurer is now looking for motorists to help trial the technology.

At the moment, the technology is available only for people with Android operating systems on their smartphones, although other operating systems will join the party at some point in the future.

Mr Treloar said: "We will ask those helping us to shape this new proposition to tell us what they think of the app and what improvements could be made to benefit the customer."

Growing agricultural business

A DRIVE to sell Kent's agricultural and horticultural industry across the world is to be launched in October.

The formation of Kent Rural plc was announced at this year's county show and a working group is looking at how the county can obtain a greater part of the international marketplace.

It will be looking to promote all aspects of rural business, from conditions, climate and soil to an expert workforce and long experience of excellence in produce and livestock.

Among those working on the project is the High Sheriff of Kent, Michael Bax, who has many years' experience of rural businesses.

"The annual turnover of the county's agricultural and horticultural business is around £500 million," he said. "If Kent Rural plc was a real plc, it would be ranked at around 60th in the FTSE 100 Index, which is quite impressive."

Bax says he is working to encourage investment in rural business by companies that have not traditionally been associated with the countryside.

These include firms working in the fields of storage, transport, water-management and packaging.

"The economy has been going through tough times," he said. "But I

This week Nick Ames focuses on an innovative move to rebrand Kent and its rural business as an overall concern in an effort to attract inward investment from new sources. Traditionally, the county has been one of the most important in the UK for agriculture and horticulture – surprisingly, perhaps, it would rate in the FTSE 100 if the figures were added together. We also take a look at how those who work the land are being urged to push for a greater say in its management.

the climate combine to provide excellent conditions for fruit, hops, vegetables – although that area is slightly in decline due to imports – wheat, barley and livestock.

"But agriculture has been an inward-looking business and we want to reach out to other areas and bring in new investment.

"One of the things which has benefited us is the expanding populations and changing tastes in countries such as India and China.

"Farmers used to produce a surplus which would be swallowed up in things like the so-called butter mountain. Now that surplus is exported. There is demand for UK produce from Asia. Not only are there many more people to feed, they are getting a taste for our produce. Where populations used to eat rice, now they want meat and bread.

"During the late 80s and 90s, farms were breaking even at best, but because of these factors most are in profit.

"Then there is the increasing demand for local produce, which is welcome."

Bax said a change in the demographic make-up of farmers had given the industry a chance to progress.

"We have also seen a period when many farmers were getting close to 60. Well, now they are retiring and giving younger people the chance to run the businesses.

"Technical advancements have made it possible to regulate spraying and fertilising of crops on a metre-by-metre basis and most machinery is now highly computerised.

"Young people take to that sort of thing like ducks to water – and they are also extremely good at marketing themselves, which is increasingly important if you are looking to increase your share of the market itself."

Kent Rural plc will be launched at the East Malling agricultural research centre on Friday, October 26.

would like to see companies not previously involved with rural businesses coming to work with a sector which has come through the recession.

and market itself in this way, so we are at the cutting edge of the business.

"Traditionally, the county is one of the most important in Britain when it comes to agriculture. The good soils and

HIGH SHERIFF'S EXPERIENCE EMBRACES THE LAND

MICHAEL Bax was installed in the post of High Sheriff of Kent on April 1, 2012.

The post is largely ceremonial but also concerns itself with law-enforcement and the judiciary.

Bax has spent his business career advising farmers and landowners in Kent and East Sussex and is senior partner of the BTF Partnership, a land agency based at Challock.

He is a former pupil of King's School, Canterbury, and qualified as a professional associate of the Royal Institute of Chartered Surveyors in 1977, having attained a degree in estate management.

Bax spent his early career with Prall, Champion and Prall in Tonbridge, becoming an equity partner in 1979. Then, following a merger in 1984 with Porter and Cobb, he took charge of agricultural and property matters at the newly-created Cobbs Property Services.

In 1986 Cobbs was taken over by General Accident and Bax was appointed director of agriculture and forestry for the South East region. In 1988 he set up practice as a sole practitioner. A year later he was joined by an equity partner to create Bax Standen.

Since 1998, after a reorganisation of the partnership, the practice traded as Bax Thomas French. Following a merger with two further firms – a commercial-property practice in Canterbury and a project-management team in Hadlow – the company is now BTF Partnership and employs some 20 people at offices in Challock, Hadlow and Canterbury, advising farming clients and businesses across Kent and beyond.

Bax runs his own 225-acre farm between Ashford and Tenterden, including a 120-acre woodland grant scheme. He and wife Jan have two children, William and Sarah, and a granddaughter, Tabitha.

Put your rural knowledge to good use by supporting nature partnerships

THE Country Land and Business Association is urging farmers and landowners to become involved with the new Local Nature Partnerships (LNPs) across Kent, saying that those who own and manage the land must play a key part in the LNPs' decision-making process.

The call follows the announcement by Environment Minister Richard Benyon of 41 successful LNPs, a Government initiative to include all sectors of society in the natural environment.

CLA South East regional surveyor Tim Broomhead said: "We need people with genuine experience of the rural economy and landmanagement to contribute to LNP proposals in their area.

"The association is already encouraging its members to engage with LNPs to ensure that equal attention is paid to all three pillars of sustainable development, including economic as well as social and environmental criteria.

"Most importantly, we need to ensure that LNP designation does not stifle rural enterprise due to a tightening of planning regulations, which we have been assured by ministers is not the intention. This makes the need for a rural watchdog crucial.

"The CLA has successfully shown that farmers and landowners provide numerous goods and services, including many environmental benefits that are undervalued and under-delivered as people are not prepared to pay for them.

"This situation can only be improved if those who are charged with delivering the environment that the public wants have a say in how it is paid for and delivered."

Olympics helps Channel trains break records

LE SHUTTLE, the car-carrying trains run by Eurotunnel through the Channel Tunnel, has set a new traffic record.

In the seven days up to Sunday, August 12, 74,292 vehicles – cars, motorcycles, caravans and camper-vans – and 776 coaches travelled in both directions between Folkestone and Coquelles, Pas-de-Calais.

This is the most traffic seen in one week since the end of duty-free in 1999.

To manage this, 838 Shuttle departures were needed, at five an hour.

At the same time, a new daily record was also achieved, with 15,152 vehicles travelling across the Channel on Saturday, August 11, in both directions.

This follows the increase in traffic seen as a result of the Olympic Games, when Le Shuttle Continental bookings rose by 16 per cent for the period from Monday, July 23, to Sunday, August 12.

There were 40 additional Eurostar departures during the Games.

Jacques Gounon, chairman and chief executive officer of Groupe Eurotunnel, said: "In a highly-competitive market, this new record demonstrates the efficiency and flexibility inherent to the Le Shuttle service, the professionalism of our staff and the attraction of a transport system that is both fast and environmentally friendly."

Insure your business against the high-cost risks of cyber crime

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

BUSINESSES are continuing to place themselves at risk of cyber crime, according to experts at insurance broker Bluefin, following research that reveals a sharp rise in online criminal attacks.

The warning comes as several reports provide fresh evidence of the scale of the threat faced by UK industry.

A report by Cambridge University calculated that cyber criminals cost the UK £11 billion each year, while an Experian study released this month found that the trade in illegal data had already doubled in size compared with last year.

As well as the immediate costs associated with a data breach, there is also potential damage to a company's reputation. According to another report compiled earlier this year, the average cost of a large organisation's worst security breach is £110,000-£250,000 and £15,000-£30,000 for a small business.

Cyber crime refers to malicious criminal activity targeted at individuals and businesses online and can include identity theft, fraud and extortion as well as the theft of intellectual property and data. As businesses across all sectors of the economy become increasingly reliant on the internet, the potential damage from cyber attacks has risen dramatically.

Last year, following consultation with a number of customers, Bluefin raised concerns that businesses of all sizes were being targeted.

Managing director Richard Dyer said: "There is still a worrying lack of awareness over just how widespread cybercrime has become. Any business, large or small, that relies on the internet holds customer data or has commercially-sensitive intellectual property is potentially at risk. This is no longer an issue that can be left to the IT department to deal with.

"Insurance companies are working hard to design policies that will protect businesses against the new and emerging threats arising out of e-

BE PREPARED

To help businesses combat online crime, Bluefin suggests five key points to consider:

1. Review company-wide IT systems and ensure staff are aware of current best practice.
2. Conduct a detailed risk assessment to identify any potential weak points in security and ensure all firewall protection and anti-virus software is up to date.
3. Examine insurance policies and consider whether specialist online fraud cover is required.
4. Provide training to new and existing employees highlighting ways to improve data security.
5. Develop a series of contingency plans to help your business continue in the event of a data breach or other cyber crime.

commerce and internet technologies. However, it is imperative businesses are aware of the risks and take appropriate steps to ensure they are prepared in the event they are targeted."

PARTNERSHIPS

The other half is a key player in small firms

NEW research by Direct Line For Business reveals more than half (51 per cent) of UK tradesmen rely on so-called TWAGs (tradesmen's wives and girlfriends) to help run their company.

Despite TWAGs working on average two days a week – with one in four working three or more days a week – almost a third (31 per cent) of small-trade business-owners do not pay them any money at all.

The research showed 46 per cent of small-business-owners relied on their partners to carry out general business administration, while one in five (19 per cent) employed their partner as a receptionist.

More than one in seven (14 per cent) relied on their partners to look after legal and accounting services. A further 8 per cent of small-trade business-owners looked to their partners to carry out sales, marketing and new-business-generation work.

Jazz Gakhal, head of Direct Line For Business, said: "Small businesses are crucial in re-energising the UK economy. It is therefore heartening to see partners working together to sustain these small companies despite not being fully financially compensated.

"It is clear that small-trade businesses are seeking voluntary help from their partners to avoid high legal, secretarial or IT support fees, but it is vital that these businesses ensure their partners are adequately covered in the event of an accident."

Ensure you're up to date with staff law

EMPLOYMENT law is a minefield for many members of the business community as it is complex, constantly changing and has serious implications – especially in challenging economic times.

But help is at hand to clarify employment legislation at a workshop in Medway presented by leading South East law firm Furley Page.

The Employment Law Update 2012/2013 workshop, run in partnership with Kent Invicta Chamber of Commerce, will be held on Thursday, October 18, and is open to chamber members and non-members, whatever the size of their workforce.

Leading the interactive workshop will be Andrew Masters, partner and head of employment at Furley Page.

"This workshop will help employers and HR professionals keep up to date with the ever-changing complexities of employment law," said Masters. "As well as practical guidance, there will be question-and-answer sessions, so there's plenty of opportunity for delegates to raise issues of concern."

He will be joined by Amanda Okill, a senior

solicitor who specialises in employment law, and financial planning manager Simon Ludden, who specialises in pensions and independent financial advice and will provide guidance on pension auto-enrolment.

The workshop is to be held at a new venue for 2012, the Bridgewood Manor Hotel, Walderslade Woods, Chatham. Registration is from 8am, with the workshop starting at 8.30am and finishing at noon.

The Furley Page team will guide delegates through recent developments in employment law and offer practical guidance on how to prepare for change. The effects on HR policies and procedures and people management will also be examined.

The team will cover new cases, employment reforms and the implementation of European Directives, while a light will be shone on the Coalition Government's sweeping programme of change to employment law.

An update will also be provided on pension auto-enrolment plans.

The workshop costs £35 to Kent Invicta Chamber members and £45 to non-members. To book, phone 01622 232707, email bookings@kentinvictachamber.co.uk, or visit www.kentinvictachamber.co.uk/furleypage to reserve a place.

Train your way to success with an apprenticeship

THOUSANDS of apprentice positions are available in Kent and the south east – and for those willing to travel, there are more than 15,000 nationally.

This new data from the National Apprenticeship Service will be encouraging for those who have just passed their GCSEs in the county.

The apprenticeships range from nursing, IT, horticulture, business, life science, fisheries, legal, and creative. And those on the courses get paid while learning.

Included are new higher apprenticeships, which provide up to degree-level qualifications for apprentices and enable employers, colleges and universities to deliver the advanced skills most critical for growth.

The average gross weekly pay for apprentices is £200. But London Economics has calculated the lifetime benefit of achieving a Level 2 apprenticeship is extra earnings of between £48,000 and £74,000. The equivalent figure for a Level 3 apprenticeship is between £77,000 and £117,000.

There are three levels of apprenticeship available. The first is the intermediate level, where apprentices work towards work-based learning qualifications such as a Level 2 competence qualification, functional skills and, in most cases, a relevant knowledge-based qualification.

Next is advanced level, with those on the course heading towards work-based learning such as a Level 3 competence qualification, functional skills and, in most cases, a relevant knowledge-based qualification. And finally, there are higher apprenticeships, where they work towards work-based learning qualifications.

GCSEs not what you expected? Then don't panic

GCSE students worried about missing out on the chance to study A-levels are being handed a lifeline by MidKent College.

Young people who failed to achieve five A*-C grades at GCSE are invited to enrol on the new Level 2 Progression to A-Levels Diploma, which includes the opportunity to re-sit exams in GCSE English and maths.

Upon successful completion of the Medway course – based on a mixture of humanities and social science subjects such as history, politics, psychology, English and communication studies – students will be eligible to stay on at the college to study the A-levels of their choosing.

"We believe in giving young people a second chance, especially when it comes to their education," said Emma Wilkinson, head of faculty for higher and academic studies at the college.

She adds: "This new course represents a fantastic opportunity for anyone who just missed out on achieving five A*-C grades at GCSE but still wants to study A-levels at a later date.

"Whether you did better or worse than expected in your GCSEs, there are many benefits to studying here.

"We are passionate about education and are fully committed to providing our students with the best teaching possible."

Hitting the catwalk with stylish summer school to find next fashion icon

STUDENTS keen to follow in the footsteps of Karen Millen and study fashion at the University for the Creative Arts got a taste of what life might be like in a unique residential summer school.

Some 35 students from across Kent and beyond spent five days at UCA Rochester and lived like real students, learning new skills from the same expert lecturers and technicians that send degree students to Graduate Fashion Week.

The aspiring fashion designers, stylists and photographers, aged 14-19, created a portfolio of work, which culminated in a memorable catwalk show for family and friends.

Summer school coordinator, Loreta Jarvis, said: "The week-long residential school aims to inspire and engage young people who have a passion for fashion."

"It not only teaches them practical and theoretical skills but also builds their confidence and prepares them for life at an arts university."

The outreach project received its highest level of interest this year and more than half of participants were from outside of Kent for the first time.

Ben Kidger, a summer school leader, said: "I have been a mentor and summer school leader at UCA for the last 11 years and, every summer I witness the huge benefits that this course offers young, creative people.

"The end result is often life-changing for them, as they parade down the catwalk in front of their friends and family, showing off the creations they have made – they always go away with a confidence that perhaps wasn't there before."

And Gabriella Hatley from Sittingbourne Community College, added: "On the UCA summer school I learned how to draw in a more fashion related style. I have enjoyed the dynamic drawings I have produced, these have been used to record my inspiration and I have incorporated them into my final catwalk creation. It's all been very inspirational."

UCA's Fashion School has produced household names including Karen Millen and Zandra Rhodes. Ms Millen became one of the high street's best known names after growing up in Maidstone. Two recent graduates are currently battling it out to design for Rihanna in Sky Living's Styled to Rock and in 2009 Myrto Stamou won the prestigious Gold Award at Graduate Fashion Week.

TWIRL: Could the next Karen Millen be just around the corner thanks to UCA?

Still spaces to spare at top college

EAST Kent College – previously known as Thanet College – has revealed places are still available through clearing to study from this September on one of its new Higher National Certificate courses.

A new range of 10 HNCs are provided in partnership with Canterbury Christ Church University, and are an accessible and affordable alternative to university, with a direct route to the second year of a full degree.

The new one-year courses, equivalent to the first year of an undergraduate degree, cross a range of subjects like business, creative arts, science, and technology.

The college said they have a strong work-related emphasis, and are perfect for anyone uncertain about university, or who has not had the results they hoped for.

For those looking for an alternative to studying business at university, there is also the brand new Peter Jones Enterprise Academy, launching at the college this September. The enterprise and entrepreneurship course gives students the opportunity to launch a micro business, and be their own boss.

Advisors will be at Canterbury Christ Church University's Broadstairs campus on September 4 and the East Kent College campus on September 5 from 4.30-6.30pm, and between the same times on September 12.

OPPORTUNITY: HNCs are worth considering

Schools & education

Final piece of £100m jigsaw will be icing on top of college's renovation

THE final stages of Canterbury College's multi-million pound redevelopment are coming to an end.

Work on the New Dover Road site began in summer 2006, finishing this January, with the majority of the campus' buildings being redeveloped. The latest project began with the demolition of H-Block, the last of the old teaching buildings, during the holidays.

In its place will be Block 17, a three-storey complex which will continue the college's tradition of award-winning building design. It will be home to the college's supported learning provision, including a fully functioning training flat which will have a living room, kitchen and bathroom areas.

Block 17 will also be the base of its higher education provision and will contain 30 new classrooms, art studios, lecture theatres, and a student common room.

The overall redevelopment project will have taken seven years and cost more than £100 million.

The already-completed buildings feature four hair salons, a fully functioning training spa, a children's centre, dance and drama theatre, motor vehicle centre, veterinary nursing, sports therapy and student recreation facilities. The building will be similar to the recently-opened A-Block and be open next September.

Why not push the button on a career in the field of electronics?

ANYONE interested in a career using electronics of almost any type can join one of the few remaining courses at North West Kent College.

It has Higher National Certificates (HNCs) in electrical and electronic engineering at the redeveloped Gravesend campus.

From September the college is also offering Higher National Diplomas and Higher National Apprenticeships.

The HNC in electrical and electronic engineering is a two-year programme covering digital systems, analytical methods, electrical science and electrical and electronic principles.

It is a Level 4/5 qualification and covers a work-based project to allow learners to progress onto a HND or degree programme.

Once completing the course, students can progress into job areas such as medical engineering, electronic design and cybernetics, the college said.

Robert Haddon, 23, from Gravesend, works for Launch Diagnostics, a medical engineering company in Longfield. He came to North West Kent College in 2010 to complete a HNC in electrical and electronic engineering. Since completing his HNC, he has now been promoted to a field engineer.

Scott Wilkins, curriculum manager for engineering, said: "We have a good history of students progressing from Level 3 and 4 programmes and going on to university or straight into work.

"We also have close business links with companies such as Coca Cola and BAE systems, which creates good links between our students and the industry."

Graduates on course for success thanks to AEG-backed foundation

YOUNGSTERS seeking a career working for one of the world's biggest sports and entertainment companies have begun to benefit from a partnership between the University of Greenwich and promotions giant AEG.

AEG owns the O2 Arena and teamed up with the university – which has a campus in Medway – to offer a foundation degree in venues, events and hospitality management.

And after two years of study, three students have graduated after receiving guidance from AEG staff as well as work placements with the company.

Student Daniel Rolfe said: "I work as event hospitality manager for the VIP areas of the O2. I saw the course advertised at work and felt it could be a big step forward for me, and it has been.

"During the course we looked at the whole industry. When you're in the middle of something you often don't think about how and why you are doing things, so studying really opened the industry up to me."

An AEG spokesperson said: "We are delighted with the success of the programme. The ability to work with our local university and provide our employees with a formally-recognised and industry-specific qualification is something not many companies can boast.

"The commitment of the individuals to succeed has been amazing."

"Peter and I just wanted to say how thrilled we are with Freddie's results - we couldn't have hoped for better. Freddie came to RIC without Cs in his GCSE English and Maths. In the two years he has been with you he has passed these, achieved 4 excellent 'A' level grades and a place at Edinburgh University. It is fair to say Freddie didn't have much confidence academically when he arrived. He now has this but is not over-confident if you know what I mean."

BACKING KENT'S FUTURE

There are so many options when choosing next step after exams

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

FOR school-leavers, there are increasing options when it comes to finishing full-time education armed with GCSEs and A-levels.

The increase in university tuition fees means that further study is not the only item on the agenda as many businesses are looking to recruit directly to the workplace.

Employers in finance, retail and transport management have reported an increase in interest among school-leavers in taking their first step on the career ladder rather than using the next few years to obtain a degree.

This trend is illustrated graphically by the website notgoingtouni.com – set up as a service for young people considering options other than further study.

The site has had 150,000 visitors so far this year, compared with 100,000 for the equivalent time in 2011.

Part of the reason is that students starting university for the first time this summer will be the first to pay up to £9,000 a year for a degree.

But another aspect that has changed is the increased opportunities that many companies are offering for part-time study along with real workplace experience – and a paid salary.

CHOICES: School-leavers don't have to go to university... colleges have so many options to consider, or there's work!

DIDN'T get the A-level grades you were expecting?

Whether better or worse than you were hoping for, why not consider enrolling on an Higher Education course at MidKent College?

The college offers a number of Higher National Diplomas/Certificates and foundation degrees at just £5,700 a year – far less than the £9,000 maximum charged by some universities.

What's more, if you sign up for a full-time HE course today, you may also be eligible to receive a £1,000 progression bursary in the first year.

Director of HE development Stephen Batchelor said:

"Money should not be a barrier to education, which is why we try to keep our course fees as low as possible.

"As the UK navigates its way through a double-dip recession, providing employability skills for our learners remains a key focus for MidKent College.

"We have designed a series of qualifications that will provide young people with the skills and abilities they need to be successful in building a career and gaining an edge in the ever-more crowded job market, making Higher Education a worthwhile long-term investment."

Should you enrol on an HE course at MidKent College, you will be guaranteed the highest quality of teaching. Part of the reason for that is that all of its courses are validated by either the University of Kent, Canterbury Christ Church University or Edexcel, and they are taught from state-of-the-art facilities at the college's Medway and Maidstone campuses.

Several new courses were recently added to the college's existing HE offer, which includes HNC/Ds and/or foundation degrees in applied chemistry, business, building and civil engineering, information technology, engineering, qualifying to teach in the lifelong learning sector and childhood studies.

Among the subjects covered by the new courses are hospitality and event management, performing arts, security, entrepreneurship, sport and leisure management and health and social care.

KING'S Rochester is celebrating another year of top A-level results.

About one-third of all passes were in the coveted A* and A brackets and 62 per cent were top grades A* to B.

More than 86 per cent of all passes were A* to C, and staff and pupils can also celebrate the fact that all of the 22 subjects taken this year achieved a 100 per cent pass rate, with 15 per cent of the 65 candidates achieving straight A* and As.

The 40 per cent of students in the grammar stream at this broad-ability school achieved an average points score per pupil of 412.3.

At GCSE, more than 40 per cent of grades were A* or A this year and close to 70 per cent were A* to B – so good cause for celebration.

Jacob Porter netted a straight 11 A* and As, closely followed by classmates Stephen Green (10), Jacques Bestel (nine), Alexander Lindley (eight), Laurence Long (eight) and Charlotte Titmuss (eight). Gemma La Guardia and Olivia Blanning both gained 11 A* to C grades.

Several academic departments, including mathematics, ICT, music, Latin and German, registered a 100 per cent A* to C pass rate this year.

If you would like to hear more about how King's helps pupils to exceed their expectations academically, as well as supporting their musical, sporting, dramatic and other talents outside the classroom, you can visit the upcoming open morning.

Jeremy Walker, the school's new principal, will speak to visitors on Saturday, October 6, at 9.45am.

Phone 01634 888590 or email admissions@kings-rochester.co.uk for further information.

AN INDEPENDENT college is celebrating another great year.

Rochester Independent College students this year have won places at medical, dental and law schools and at institutions ranging from Central St Martins to the Architectural Association, UCL to Durham. A record three will go to Trinity College, Cambridge.

Many students make the move to RIC after their GCSEs to maximise A-level grade potential.

They may have been very successful in Year 11, but some have been denied entry to their school

WELL DONE: Harry Neilson is one of the many high-achieving students to have completed their study at Rochester Independent College sixth form or need to retake key GCSE subjects.

Harry Neilson, who will read philosophy at Sheffield, said: "My GCSE grades from Maidstone Grammar were not quite as good as I was expecting – I just didn't try hard. I could have stayed but moved for sixth form.

"I've been helped by the small classes – the teachers are passionate about their subjects and really know their stuff."

Maneesh Dhillon joined with grade Es in chemistry and biology after a disappointing Year 12. After two years' hard work, he graded ABB at A-level and has a place at Medway School of Pharmacy.

James Weber from Sevenoaks was not allowed to do A-level biology at his previous school as he did not have the required GCSE grade A in the subject. He switched to RIC and now has A*BB at A-level and a place studying animal psychology.

Laurence Routledge joined from Gad's Hill School. He is now celebrating an impressive five A-levels – maths, further maths, physics, geography and drama – and has a place to study astrophysics at the University of Sussex.

He said: "I was free to choose whatever subjects I liked because there were no option blocks. I was able to do more A-levels because RIC doesn't waste time doing subjects like general studies or critical thinking – things the universities aren't interested in."

Bishop of Rochester Academy to offer Music Scholarships from September

The Bishop of Rochester Academy, in Magpie Hall Road, Chatham, announced the introduction of 'Music Scholarships'. 25 Music Scholarship places are available to students joining the Academy in Year 7 from this September, 2012.

Any child who is interested in music may apply for one of these twenty-five Music Scholarship places at the Bishop of Rochester Academy each year. Parents who have seen their child develop an interest or talent in music are urged to ensure that their child benefits from this opportunity by applying for a Year 7 place at the Bishop of Rochester Academy from this September onwards.

As Music is one of the Bishop of Rochester Academy's 'Specialisms' the Scholarships are intended to support and enhance the standard and variety of music-making at the Academy.

"The Academy already has a strong musical culture and there is a lot of talent amongst the current students. Our students really enjoy performing," said Mr Boxall, the Academy Principal. "And, as parents will know... learning Music helps children with their learning of Maths - it's very important that students achieve well in the Core academic subjects. The Academy's other 'Specialism' is Maths & Computing, which helps focus on Core Skills," he added.

Students attending the Bishop of Rochester Academy through a Music Scholarship will enjoy a variety of benefits, which may include such things as free music lessons (instrumental and/or singing), free use of a musical instrument to take home for practice, free music-related trips, involvement in musical performances, school uniform, and a music-based curriculum.

Applicants will be considered on the basis of their genuine interest in music, their enthusiasm and their likely contribution to music-making at the Academy in the future. Successful students will be expected to attend ensemble or choral rehearsals and to take part in concerts and/or other musical activities.

"The Scholarships are for students who are serious about music - whether that's composing music, using the latest technology in music-editing software soon to be available at the Bishop of Rochester Academy; playing a musical instrument - traditional or modern; being in a band or part of an orchestra; or singing - choral or pop," said the Academy's Musical Director, Karen Fowler - who is co-ordinating the Scholarships.

"There is infinite variety in music-making in the world today, and through our Music Specialism at the Bishop of Rochester Academy we are aiming to help the young people of Medway to develop their talents in music, supported by these new Scholarships," she added.

For more information, or to apply for a Music Scholarship place at the Bishop of Rochester Academy for your child, parents/carers should contact the:

Sale of Former Dunkirk Primary School, Dunkirk
Faversham, Kent (“the Property”)

This is a notice made by The Kent County Council (“the Council”) under S.3 of the Reverter of Sites Act 1987 (“The 1987 Act”).

The Council is the freehold owner of the Property, which it intends to sell.

The Council owns the Property pursuant to:

- a Conveyance dated 14th November 1887 made between Henry Woolwright and The School Board for the Ville of Dunkirk; and
- a Deed of Grant dated 4 February 1845 made between Baron Sodes and the Incumbent and Churchwardens of Christ Church in the Ville of Dunkirk.

The Property is subject to rights of reverter, having been transferred to the Council's statutory predecessor for educational purposes under the School Sites Act 1841 (“the 1841 Act”). The Property therefore reverts to the original grantor's estate if it ceases to be used for the purposes for which it was transferred.

The Council closed the school operating on the Property on 31 March 2008.

Under the 1841 and 1987 Acts, the Council now holds the Property on a statutory trust for the successors in title to Henry Woolwright and Baron Sodes.

Anyone considering themselves to be a beneficiary under the statutory trust affecting the Property should inform the Council of their claim by writing to:

Catherine Lloyd
Kent County Council Legal Services
Sessions House
Maidstone
Kent County Council ME14 1XQ

before midnight on Thursday 6th December 2012

The Council intends to make an application to the Charity Commission pursuant to S.2 of the 1987 Act to extinguish the rights of any beneficiaries (being the successors in title of Henry Woolwright and Baron Sodes) under the statutory trust and establish a scheme to apply the monies for such charitable purposes as the Charity Commissioners specify.

WARNING

Any person considering themselves a beneficiary under the statutory trust affecting the Property and wishing to oppose the extinguishment of their rights should notify the trustees of their claim in the manner and time specified in this notice.

TERMS & CONDITIONS

ARCHANT KOS MEDIA LTD
TERMS AND CONDITIONS

- Advertisements will be accepted only on the express condition that the advertiser warrants that the advertisement does not in any way contravene any existing legislation and in particular the Trade and Description Act 1968 and the Consumer Credit Act 1974.
- It is the responsibility of all advertisers to ensure that all advertising meets all forms of government legislation and Archant Kos Media Ltd (the "media owner") takes no responsibility for liability in errors and omissions to the content of our media.
- All rates quoted are subject to VAT at the rate currently in force at the time the advertisement appears.
- All rates within the annual advertising agreement will be rate protected for 12 months from the first date of publication under the signed agreement.
- Any unsuitable material posted on any website belonging to Archant Kos Media Ltd by the advertiser or any associated third party will be removed or refused. All passwords and security supplied to the advertiser by Archant Kos Media Ltd in relation to the use of the posting of material via the media owner's online administration tool will be the responsibility of the advertiser. The advertiser indemnifies Archant Kos Media Ltd against any damages as a result of misuse of these privileges by either the advertiser or any third party given password privileges by the advertiser.
- Archant Kos Media Ltd reserves the right to change passwords intermittently to ensure the overall and ongoing security of its websites within the public domain.
- Copyright and licenses for voice-over/music/photography or film for advertising promotions or otherwise within the various forms of media in print, online and moving film owned by Archant Kos Media Ltd must have been sought, verified or paid for by the advertiser where applicable. Approval or permissions must have been given by any potential beneficial owner of voice-over or music. The advertiser must be able to verify any statements or claims (promotional or otherwise) in relation to their products/services promoted within any of the media offerings belonging to Archant Kos Media Ltd.
- Where shrinkage of an advertisement occurs for whatever reason, the advertiser will be charged to the nearest full centimetre where it relates to the media owner's printed publications. This will NOT apply to full-page advertisements, which remain full pages even after shrinkage.
- Archant Kos Media Ltd reserves the right to omit or refuse any advertisement/commercial/web content without notice or explanation. In these terms the word "advertiser" shall be construed to include any person or organisation placing an advertisement on behalf of another.
- A guarantee of insertion cannot be given and the media owners shall not be liable for any loss or damage caused by any error or inaccuracy within your marketing content. In no case shall the total liability of the media owner for any error or omission exceed the price charged by the media owners for that advertising.
- No liability is accepted for any loss or damage alleged to have arisen through delay in forwarding replies to Box numbers, however caused, nor for the loss or damage to any artwork supplied.
- Claims for any error or inaccuracy in your media messages with Archant Kos Media Ltd must be made in writing to the accounts department within 10 days of publication.
- Archant Kos Media Ltd accepts no responsibility for any errors or omissions made on their websites by the advertiser.
- Archant Kos Media Ltd has the right to cancel the advertiser's annual membership without notice should the advertiser deliberately publish out of date material or content on any of the media owner's online digital platforms. Archant Kos Media Ltd will seek to recover, in full, all outstanding invoices in relation to the signed annual membership as a result of the advertiser's negligence in this regard and reserves the right to claim damages for any potential vexatious action via the advertiser's written consent.
- Advertisers are requested to check their advertisements after the first insertion. The media owner will not be responsible for any errors on subsequent insertions, which have not been advised to them in writing.
- A minimum of one month's notice must be given in writing for any cancellation of the signed annual advertiser's agreement. Upon cancellation, all discounts from Archant Kos Media's standard effective media advertising rate card (July 2008-June 2009) will be recalculated and adjusted accordingly in line with Archant Kos Media's standard media rate card (effective July 2008-June 2009) and will reflect the revised length of commitment denoted by the advertiser's written cancellation. Any surcharges, refunds or costs in relation to the production of the advertiser's TV commercial for the commitment set out within the advertiser's agreement will be met in full by the advertiser as per Archant Kos Media's standard media advertising rate card (effective July 2008-June 2009). Discounts will be reapplied and any refunds or surcharges will be paid by either party within 30 days of the advertiser's written cancellation. Any other advertising placed must give a written notice of cancellation and any discounts given for series bookings will be forfeited by the advertiser upon cancellation.
- Seasonal contracts, Your Professional classified advertisements or any uplift advertising within the annual contract with the advertiser will be invoiced in full - at rate card - on receipt of any written cancellation of this contract within the 12-months.
- All uplift advertisements must be booked in at least three months in advance of publication and will be subject to availability. All dates booked will be on a first-come, first-served basis.
- The advertiser must agree to the date and time of filming of any online TV advertising commercial supplied by Archant Kos Media Ltd within the advertiser's agreement. (Platinum, Gold, Silver standard of commercial). Should, for any reason, the advertiser not be available at the agreed time without giving sufficient notice (at least 48 hours), Archant Kos Media Ltd reserves the right to charge for any further TV production at its standard published hourly rate should the advertiser still wish to use Archant Kos Media Ltd's production services to complete its TV commercial or photographic imagery included in the advertiser's agreement. The advertiser will approve and accept that there are only two choices of voice-over and music offered by Archant Kos Media Ltd. Should an advertiser wish to use other voice-overs or non-copyright free music it is the responsibility of the advertiser to pay the PHS rights should they be required to do so. Any changes to or failure to approve the TV production by the deadlines agreed between both parties will result in Archant Kos Media Ltd being given permission by the advertiser to replace the TV commercial with pictures or stills from a choice of photography supplied by the media owner until the advertiser can supply a TV commercial produced at their own cost and risk outside of this agreement. The advertiser also accepts and agrees that this action would not reduce the value or cost of their membership. Any cost of changes required to the TV commercial throughout the advertiser's agreement will be borne by the advertiser outside of this agreement.
- Each advertiser accepts that their ranking and position within Archant Kos Media Ltd's search engine will be equal to those within their category (Platinum, Gold, Silver, Bronze, etc) other than they will be ranked based on the search engine criteria of optimisation within their level (Platinum, Gold, Silver or Bronze).
- Any delivery claims made by the advertiser or discount vouchers published within the print or online media of Archant Kos Media Ltd and any action as a result of the public or otherwise is the sole responsibility of the advertiser. Any claims resulting from this via Archant Kos Media Ltd must be met by the advertiser.
- a. All credit accounts due for payment shall be notified to the Advertiser by the 30th day following the date of the invoice, time to be of the essence. All sums due to Archant Kos Media Ltd shall be paid in full, and the advertiser shall have no right of set off in any circumstances.
- b. In the event that payment is not received by Archant Kos Media Ltd or RBS Factoring by the due date, the media owner will be entitled to suspend all further advertising until payment is received and/or repudiate the contract and make any surcharges for breaking the contract.
- c. In the event that payment is not received by Archant Kos Media Ltd by the due date, the media owner reserves the right to charge interest on all overdue balances calculated on a daily basis at the rate of two per cent above the minimum lending rate of National Westminster Bank Plc from time to time in force.
- d. Notwithstanding anything in these terms and conditions or implied to the contrary, in the event of the Advertiser ceasing to use the services of Archant Kos Media Ltd (for whatever reason), the whole amount of monies due from the Advertiser to the date of cessation shall fall due for immediate payment.
- e. The Advertiser will be liable for all costs incurred by Archant Kos Media Ltd in the recovery of debts not paid by the due date.
- f. Payment may be made by cheque, credit transfer, direct debit, cash and any major credit card.
- Any discount which Archant Kos Media Ltd may have agreed with the Advertiser shall be forfeited in the event of failure by the Advertiser to complete the contract or to meet the above credit terms.
- Advertising Agency commission will be allowed to those advertisers recognised by the Newspaper Society, but shall not exceed ten per cent and will be subject to the terms of that recognition. This commission will not be allowed if the Advertising Agency fails to meet the terms.
- All private advertisements and certain categories as laid down by Archant Kos Media (Publishing) Ltd must be prepaid.
- The Advertiser agrees to indemnify Archant Kos Media Ltd in respect of all costs, damages or other charges falling upon the media owners or any of the companies within the Archant Kos Media Group as the result of legal action or threatened legal action or threatened legal arising from the publication of any advertisement or advertising promotion.
- An order for an advertisement shall amount to acceptance of these terms and conditions, and any condition placed on an order by an Advertiser shall be null and void in so far as it conflicts with them.
- Copyright in advertisements produced wholly or partially by the media owners belong to Archant Kos Media Ltd. Advertisers may not reproduce such advertisements without the media owner's written consent.
- All terms and conditions stated above are placed to protect the advertiser, the media owner and the communities they serve within the public domain as well as the beneficial rights of individuals and organisations. Archant Kos Media will endeavour to always act reasonably in applying its terms and conditions. Effective from June 2008

COMMONS ACT 2006 - SCHEDULE 2 NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR THE AMENDMENT OF THE REGISTER OF COMMON LAND

Application has been made to the Registration Authority, Kent County Council, by Mr. I. Marsh under Paragraph 7 of Schedule 2 of the Commons Act 2006 and in accordance with the Commons Registration (England) Regulations 2008. The application has been made on the basis that the area of land concerned was wrongly registered as Common Land. The effect of the application, if successful, is to remove land from the Register of Common Land for unit number CL82, as described in the Schedule below.

The application may be inspected at the offices of Kent County Council at the address below. Please contact the Commons Registration Team on 01622 221568 to make an appointment prior to visiting to ensure that a member of the team is available to assist you.

Any person wishing to make representations regarding the application should send a written statement of the facts upon which the representation is based to the Commons Registration Team at Kent County Council, either by post at the address below or by email to commons.villagegreens@kent.gov.uk, so as to arrive no later than Monday 15th October 2012. Please quote reference CAA17/CL82. Representations must include the name and postal address of the person making them and the nature of their interest (if any) in the land affected by the application. They must also be signed by the person making them and state the grounds on which they are made.

Please note that any representations that are to be taken into account by the Registration Authority in reaching a decision on the application cannot be treated as confidential and may come into the public domain during the processing of the application. Copies of any objections or representations received will be forwarded to the applicant for comment and may be disclosed to other interested parties, including the Planning Inspectorate where the case is referred to for determination.

Description and effect of the application

The application seeks to amend the Register of Common Land for unit number CL82 at Sevenoaks by removing from the registration a parcel of land of approximately 0.85 acres (0.34 hectares) comprising part of the garden of the property known as 'Keveral' at Windmill Road in the town of Sevenoaks.

KENT COUNTY COUNCIL (ZR81 (PART) HARTLIP) DEFINITIVE MAP MODIFICATION ORDER 2006

On 15 August 2011 the Kent County Council confirmed the above Order without modifications.

The effect of the Order as confirmed is to modify the Definitive Map and Statement for the area by deleting that length of Public Footpath ZR81 which commences from NGR TQ 8417 6383 (Point A), running on the western side of the boundary for 61 metres in a northerly direction to NGR TQ 8419 6388 (Point B) and adding that length of Public Footpath ZR81 with a width of between 1.2 and 1.5 metres commencing from NGR TQ 8417 6383 (Point A) running on the eastern side of the boundary for 61 metres in a northerly direction to the aforementioned Point B.

All distances are approximate, all directions are general.

A copy of the Order as confirmed and Map may be seen free of charge during office hours at the offices of Swale Borough Council, Swale House, East Street, Sittingbourne, Kent, ME10 3HT or at the Kent County Council, Countryside Access Service, Invicta House, County Hall, Maidstone, Kent ME14 1XX. Copies of the Order and map may also be purchased there.

This Order became operative as from 15 August 2011 but if a person aggrieved by the Order desires to question the validity thereof or of any provision contained therein on the grounds that it is not within the powers of Section 53(3)(c)(i) or 53(3)(c)(iii) of the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981, or that any of the requirements of Schedule 15 to the Act have not been complied with in relation to the confirmation of the Order, he may, under Paragraph 12 of Schedule 15 to the Act, within 42 days from 2nd September 2012 make application for the purpose to the High Court.

This document is available in alternative formats and can be explained in a range of languages.

THE INTERVIEW

Sam Willis

SILENT performers have a rich history in the comedy world, with the likes of Buster Keaton and Charlie Chaplin being household names around the globe.

Now there is one more to add to that list – The Boy With Tape On His Face.

“Ironically enough,” he said, “word of mouth is getting out.”

Stand-up comedian Sam Willis, better known as ‘The Boy’ or ‘Tape Face’, is coming off the back of a third year of sell-out performances at the Edinburgh Comedy Festival, a Royal Variety performance and an ever-increasing number of TV appearances.

All this with out a single word being uttered.

The 35-year-old has bagged awards from Chortle as “breakthrough act” in 2011 and Fosters as “best newcomer” in 2010, along with a string of gongs showing his notoriety in his native New Zealand and adopted Australia.

He is keen to reveal how his show differs from others in his genre: “I describe my show as stand-up comedy without talking, so if you like stand-up comedy then you will like my show.”

“I use the same sort of formats as a regular gig, with set-ups then punch lines, but my difference is that I am on stage for an hour with a bit of gaffer tape over my mouth.”

Audience participation is key to Willis’s routine and in live comedy it can always be dangerous to use audience members – they are unpredictable. But he uses the crowd to keep participants in check.

“Most people are really keen to play along and get into it. When they get up on stage there is an initial fear of being in front of an audience for some, but once they realise the people are supportive the stage becomes a much safer place to be, which is really nice.

“I use props and people to create the jokes. Because of the show I do, there is no real wrong way to do it. So people getting up on stage have got a very small job as part of the gag.

“The key is getting them into the right place at the right time for the joke to work,” he said.

But for those who have never seen him, the show is by no means silent. In fact, The Boy’s new 38-date tour, which sees him come to The Marlowe Theatre in Canterbury, features a gunfight, a battle with Darth Vader and bringing John Lennon back to life.

“There is a huge amount of music in the show. When I do a key joke, then a key piece of music will suddenly play that will make it funnier and sillier.

“A lot of the time I get my inspiration from the music first when I am writing material. So

Witnessing the superb silence

Joe Bill meets The Boy With Tape On His Face – an unusual comic making a big noise around the UK... by not actually saying anything at all when I hear one of those nostalgic 80s songs, then I will start working on a bit, just based around that song.

“I tend to limit my music tastes for the show to 80s and 90s because that is the target audience I am trying to create that nostalgic feeling for.

“Modern music is all good and fine, but for me there is not a great deal of comedy value in it.”

Recent appearances on ITV’s Comedy Rocks have helped to propel him into the UK spotlight, but, as Willis explains, this was never the intention in the beginning.

When I do a key joke, then a key piece of music will suddenly play that will make it funnier and sillier...

WILLIS, ON HIS ACT

In fact, it was a magic set the comedian received as a child that set him on his way to becoming an apprentice to a clown in Timaru, his home town in New Zealand.

“After learning a few tricks, I knocked on the door of our local clown and asked if he would take me on, and he did.

“He taught me all the basics of unicycling and stuff like that and through this my passion became juggling.

I wanted to be a juggler in Las Vegas – that was my big goal.”

Willis then did the one thing that all parents tell you not to do.

“I discovered a few towns up from where I lived there was a circus school. So I literally ended up dropping out of school and ran away to circus school. It was great fun.

“I juggled for two years and ended up staying at the school to teach juggling.

“It was there I got interested in the circus sideshows and the ‘freak show’... all that Coney Island sort of stuff. I loved it all,” he said.

Willis perfected the art of hammering a nail up his nose and other stunts before finding himself on stage performing “weird carnival tricks”.

“I was making a career out of doing all these stunts and talking a lot of comedy, but I suppose I got bored of the sound of my own voice and decided to try something completely new and shoved tape over my face.”

And so The Boy character was born... almost.

“When I went on stage the first time as the new character I had it all planned out and I walked out and completely ruined it by talking to the audience. So the next night on stage I put the tape on my face to stop the urge to talk – so it was actually born out of necessity than a character-driven choice.

“The tape I use is pretty industrial – I ship it from Australia to the UK. It is a high-grade quality gaffer tape that you could probably stick a small child to a wall with.”

Now based in Essex, Willis is taking the UK by storm, but he will never completely give up on his circus-esque roots.

“I mostly focus on the tape-face stuff because it has taken over my life a wee bit, which is fine because I really enjoy it.

“But it’s still nice to sometimes go out on to the street, yell for an hour, shove my arse through a tennis racket and cut a cucumber up on someone’s stomach.

“People have no idea that at night I put a bit of tape on my face and be quiet for an hour – they are very contrasting characters.

Occasionally, people ask if I am Tape Face, and I say no. It’s like a reverse Superman type thing.”

And, like many comics, The Boy also has his heroes and influences from the comedy world.

“The comedy I enjoy the most is the likes of Jimmy Carr because they are incredibly wordy. It’s almost the polar opposite of what I do. I don’t want to just sit down and watch three hours of Charlie Chaplin. There was always something quite sneaky about Chaplin – he is willing to steal the loaf of bread to win the girl over, but I like Buster Keaton... he was happy to let life tread all over him, which always quite endearing to me.”

When it comes to the future, and what is in store for audiences, Willis keeps it nice and simple:

“I will keep doing this until I get bored with it and evolve it into something else.”

Pick Persian... before it's gone

EVER eaten Persian? If you have, you are – at least from my experience – one of a favoured few. If you haven't, firstly you're missing out, and, secondly, one opportunity to do so is probably soon to be taken from you.

Patogh (say it without the 'h') in Ramsgate is one of very few Persian restaurants in Kent to come up on a quick internet search, which of course goes some way to explaining the lack of people who have tried it, but sadly the 'To Let' sign adorning its façade serves notice that this rich culinary tradition is about to have even less a presence in the county.

Patogh's days are numbered, you see, not because it hasn't been a success but because its proprietor has so much work on elsewhere that he is unable to devote the requisite time to it.

And so it was that I ventured out on my own journey into Persian cuisine. Once I'd overcome the shock of that 'To Let' sign (this had been a long-intended meal), I took a table with my guest and chatted over the options with the proprietor's pleasant and informative son, who was doing the waiting.

He suggested the mixed starters, which was a happy chance as we had already pretty much decided on these anyway. For me, the pick of the bunch was salad olivier, comprising potato, eggs, peas, Persian luncheon meat, gherkins and mayonnaise, although the koftah berenji (balls of minced lamb, lentils, rice and dill served with a tomato sauce) and the mini mince kebabs were also good, apart from the limp and ageing lettuce on which the latter were served.

My guest focused her attentions on the kashke bademjan (aubergine topped with herbs, fried garlic and onions "with a speciality sauce made from whey") – and there were certainly no complaints from her as she tucked into the first section of her birthday meal.

It was at the second section – the mains – that I did that most irritating thing... having asked someone's advice, I promptly discarded it.

The waiter's nod had been that for this, our first taste of Persian, we should go with the kebabs. Perhaps it was this (I'm sure unintended) implication that I was a culinary novice who should play safe that pushed me towards what he termed the stews.

Hence I elected for the ghaymeh (diced lamb cooked with dahl lentils in a tomato sauce topped with thin chips and served with saffron rice), while my companion chose zerehk polo (breast of chicken cooked in a tomato sauce served with saffron rice and topped with caramelised barberries).

The one recommendation we did follow was the addition of shirin topping (caramelised almonds, pistachio, carrot, orange peel and barberries) – it was excellent and added handsomely to what should always be the most important part of a meal.

My cheery companion heartily enjoyed her dish, while I was satisfied, if not overwhelmed, by mine. A rogue herb or two – purely a personal thing, of course – worked against it a little and, truth is, I should have taken that advice and gone with a great big plate of kebabs.

Such a statement is not intended flippantly. Patogh food is good and, quite simply, I like kebabs. Perhaps I missed a bit of a trick.

My overall impression of Persian food was not – as had been ventured and indeed might have been expected, given the geography – of a cross between Turkish and Indian. Rather, this was something all on its own and bore only difficult comparison. Some will like it, some will not.

Thing is, if I want to get it right next time, I'd better hurry, as had you, if you want to try out Patogh. Or I suppose you could always buy it...

New-look White Lion will roar once more

THE White Lion in Selling has been transformed by a couple who fell in love with it while stopping off for a drink en route to France.

The countryside watering hole has been extensively refurbished by new tenants Lisa and Anthony Chesterton in a £40,000 project backed by Faversham brewery Shepherd Neame.

Lisa said: "Anthony and I used to split our time between the summer in County Clare in Ireland and the skiing season in France. We spent a night locally en route and the pub was recommended to us. After popping in for a drink we were totally bowled over. It's everything we wanted – a great location, bags of potential."

Professor in da house
Just be good to Green
Winter Gardens, Margate
Saturday, October 20, at 7.30pm
Box office 01843 292795/296111
www.margatewintergardens.co.uk

FREESTYLE ace and UK rapper Professor Green is bringing his live tour to Margate's Winter Gardens.

Green, real name Stephen Manderson, made a name for himself as a battle MC from Hackney, London, winning the prestigious freestyle Jump-Off tournament twice in a row.

But now Prof Green is a hit-maker, having penned three albums and a host of Top-10 hits. He often samples classic songs on tracks like Be Good To Me, which he recorded with Lily Allen, and Need You Tonight, based on the hook of the INXS song of the same title.

Tickets for Professor Green's Margate gig are priced at £20 and on sale now.

A SLICE of countryside is to be transformed into a pumping Ibiza-style festival with help from Port Lympne Wild Animal Park.

Classic Ibiza entertainment group The Zoo Project will bring 50 top electronic and dance artists straight from the Balearic Islands to thousands of fans at the safari park, near Hythe.

The group, who operate a weekly club night at an abandoned zoo in the hills of Benimussa in Ibiza, host a festival in the UK every summer and this time the venue has been chosen in Kent.

Revellers can enjoy sets from the likes of DJ Sneak, Scuba, Sasha, Ben Klock, Norman Nodge, Visionquest, Prosumer and Raresh.

Street fair
Join cavemen and Queen Vic
Addington Street, Ramsgate
Sunday, September 9
01843 596 194
www.whitstablebiennale.com

QUEEN Victoria – or at least someone dressed to look very much like her – will be one of the star attractions at this year's Addington Street historical fair in Ramsgate.

The fair has been running for 25 years, but the holding of this year's event had looked unlikely until friends Carol Mortlock and Phyllis Leaney decided the show must go on.

Now visitors can look forward to street entertainers (including Punch and Judy), stalls hosted by anyone from cavemen to 1950s folk, face-painters and live music.

The area will be closed to traffic for the event, which runs from 10am to 4pm, when the raffle will be drawn.

The fair is being supported by Elephant Windows.

All money raised will be given to Kent Air Ambulance.

The Ladykillers
The Marlowe, Canterbury
Tue to Sat, September 25-29
01227 787787
www.marlowetheatre.com

A HIT adaptation of the 1955 Ealing comedy The Ladykillers is coming to The Marlowe.

Starring Kent actor and Marlowe favourite Shaun Williamson, the play tells the story of eccentric little old lady Mrs Wilberforce, who lives alone in a strange lopsided house in King's Cross.

Her life is turned upside down by the arrival of Professor Marcus and his four friends, who make up the most unlikely group of criminals. Planning the heist of a security van, they plan to use Mrs Wilberforce as cover and involve her unwittingly in the plot.

The Ladykillers is adapted by Graham Linehan, best known for writing TV shows Father Ted and The I.T. Crowd.

Class cabaret Performers at stage festival

Memorial Theatre, Broadstairs
Friday, September 7
0845 2626263

THE autumn season at the Sarah Thorne Theatre Club opens with a pioneering cabaret festival.

Curtain-up on Friday, September 7, features award-winning star Brigitte Rene, who presents The Mosaic Cat Festival, a three-day mixed-arts cabaret bash.

Rene, winner of the 2011 Best Cabaret Award at The Adelaide Festival and who lives in Broadstairs, performs on both sides of the world and has five slots in the Mosaic Cat festival, including playing the part of Marlene Dietrich.

Also on the bill is Back To Backarach, an act of music and theatre written and arranged by Graeme Davies and Jamie Moore that tells the first part of the Burt Bacharach story. Tickets cost £16 for Sarah Thorne Club members and £18 for non-members.

Sausage Time Harry Hill back from the burp

www.marlowetheatre.com

COMEDIAN Harry Hill will be starting his first live tour for six years at The Marlowe Theatre next year.

The self-styled floppy-collared loon is back with his Sausage Time show that promises proof that God exists, a section just for Tongans and a chance to catch up on Harry's Nan's latest ailments.

Stouffer the Cat returns and there is a debut stand-up spot by Gary, Harry's son, recognisable for his role as Alan Sugar in Harry Hill's TV Burp.

As star of the hit show, Hill established himself in the Saturday prime-time TV schedules fronting a staggering 11 series, which scooped three BAFTA awards and two British Comedy Awards.

www.atgtickets.com/bromley

FORMER Brookside actress and model Jennifer Ellison will be playing Peter Pan in this year's Churchill Theatre Christmas panto.

After recently impressing on ITV's Dancing On Ice, Ellison will slip on the tights once more to become the leader of the lost boys in Neverland.

Studying dance from the age of three, Ellison is a talented dancer, singer and actress although is probably best known for her role of Emily Shadwick in Brookside.

Starring alongside her will be children's favourites Andrew Agnew (Balamory's PC Plum) as Captain Hook's sidekick Smee and CBBC presenter Gemma Hunt as Tinkerbell.

Tickets from £15-£26.

Friday, September 7
www.reverbnation.com/leosredlion or www.slamcartel.com

LONDON rockers Slam Cartel take their UK tour to Leo's Red Lion in Gravesend next month as part of their latest track launch.

New single Breathe has already become a favourite with Slam fans and has now been released to buy on digital sites.

Slam Cartel have been steadily gathering notoriety with the public for their true rock sound, combining hardcore hooks and rocking riffs heavily influenced by the likes of The Cult, Red Hot Chili Peppers, Guns'n'Roses and the Foo Fighters.

The group's LP Handful of Dreams has aired on Planet Rock radio since its 2011 launch.

Russian ballet

Tchaikovsky's Swan Lake

Central Theatre, Chatham

Sunday, October 21
01634 338338
www.whatsonmedway.co.uk

THE magic of Swan Lake is brought to Chatham by the Russian State Ballet and Opera House.

Tchaikovsky's classic will be sure to enchant audiences as it has done since it was first performed at Moscow's Bolshoi Theatre in 1877.

The ballet tells the story of Odette, a young princess who is turned into a swan by an evil sorcerer and can only be saved by her prince's everlasting love and eternal devotion.

Swan Lake promises to impress ballet-lovers by showcasing the outstanding skills of the production's 45 dancers. The show will entertain adult and child story-lovers alike with its vibrant portrayal of this classic tale.

Fear that first-time buyers being priced out of the housing market

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

HOUSE prices have increased three times as much as the average income over the last decade, according to the latest research from the National Housing Federation.

And this means that first-time buyers are finding it increasingly harder to get on to the housing ladder – one of several factors making the market consistently sluggish

In 2001, the average price of a home was £121,769, with the average salary £16,557, whereas today the average house price has soared to £236,518, an increase of 94 per cent.

Wage inflation has failed to match this rise, with the average salary rising to just £21,330, an increase of 29 per cent.

Banks currently require a deposit of £59,129 on an average 75 per cent mortgage. This figure is almost three years' pay at an average salary.

Back in 2001, first-time buyers could obtain 90 per cent mortgages, making the average deposit £12,177, the equivalent of just nine months of a then-average salary.

The amount of deposit needed for a mortgage has gone up by a massive 386 per cent during that time.

Eleven years ago, the ratio between average house price and salary was 7.4, but by 2011 it had risen to 11.1

David Orr, chief executive of the National Housing Federation, said: "These shocking figures show that it is getting increasingly harder for millions of people to buy a home of their own in the current climate.

"With the gap between income and house prices growing ever wider, people can often feel like they have to win the Lottery to be able to buy in their local area. A shortage of homes means the price to buy them is being pushed ever higher by the market, and out of reach of millions of hard-working families.

"Unless we start building more homes people can truly afford to match the demand, this will only get worse."

Higher rents 'hurting the UK's economy'

RENTS hit a new record high in July, according to the latest buy-to-let index from LSL Property Services.

And although this might be good news for landlords, in reality it is another symptom of the country's poorly-performing property market, say economists.

The average rent is now £725 per month according to LSL – up 2.8 per cent compared with a year ago. The figure varies across the UK and even across Kent, with areas such as Tunbridge Wells and Sevenoaks approaching the figures associated with London.

Areas such as Thanet, Medway and Swale were comparable with those in the lower category across the country, such as the North East and South West.

Analysts agree that rising rents are not good news for the economy. The first thing this means is that more people have less money to spend after they have paid for a roof over their head every month.

Economic forecasters say rising rents are just another squeeze on the cash-flows of consumers – which is not what the UK economy needs right now.

And it is argued that rising rents are indicative of something else... they are demonstrating that houses still cost too much.

One reason for this, according to experts, is that banks are scared of mortgages turning bad and don't want to give too much money to people wanting to buy houses at the moment.

Hence the numbers of people renting is going up and the increased demand for rental properties is pushing up rents.

VAUXHALL designers must have thought they had cracked it with the latest Meriva.

The masters of MPV flexibility designed their second-generation junior MPV to have a rear door that not only hinged to the rear but also swung unusually wide – a potential godsend to mums strapping in baby.

But arch-rival Ford strikes back this month with an all-new competitor, the B-Max (from £12,995) that not only has sliding rear doors but also does away with fixed centre side pillars – the strengthening is incorporated instead in the edges of the front and rear doors.

It's not just parents who will love this 1.5-metre-wide side opening but people who need to move the occasional bit of furniture, have elderly passengers, or like their sport and have loads of kit to stash aboard.

The arrangement also makes access easier in crowded streets or narrow parking bays.

Ford calls it the Easy Access Door System – well, they'd have to find some fancy name that also lends itself to abbreviation, wouldn't they?

Apparently, the brand's engineers went undercover to observe drivers in their daily routine – going shopping or picking up their children from school – to understand exactly what customers wanted from a compact car.

Apart from the door system, they also designed an easily-reconfigured seat system, with 60/40 split rear seats that fold flat with a simple one-hand, one-motion mechanism.

The front passenger seat can also be folded, creating an extensive flat-load floor capable of swallowing loads up to 2.34 metres long.

Combined with the generous side access, this makes it particularly convenient to load bulky items such as flat-pack furniture or bikes.

An adjustable floor in the boot creates a flat load space when the rear seats are lowered, with extra room below to hide valuables.

With all this flexibility, Ford believes the B-Max can not only capture existing MPV-users but many who would like to downsize from larger conventional cars – as many as 40 per cent of B-Max customers are expected to be in this category.

The UK market-leader has another card to play, too, in the form of an advanced voice-control system called Sync, allowing users to connect mobile phones and music players by Bluetooth or USB, make hands-free telephone calls and control music and other functions, all by using voice commands.

The powertrain choices are impressive, too, both petrol and diesel options delivering some excellent economy potential for this class: the 120PS (199bhp) 1.0-litre Ecoboost petrol (£18,195) records an official combined 57.7mpg, while the flagship diesel, the 95PS (94bhp) 1.6 TDCi, returns 70.6mpg.

Fiesta underpinnings ensure it's no mug in the handling department, either, despite the extra height and commanding driving position.

Ford maxes out on small MPV that offers you lots of space

ROOM TO MOVE: The open B-Max is built to make it easier to access the rear seats, as demonstrated by Ford designer Erika Tsubaki

DON'T LIKE

... the boxy styling. It's practical, but many MPV-buyers still want some style. Vauxhall's Meriva and the Citroën C3 Picasso look sharper.

NOT SURE

... Ford always gets the look when creating practical cars – witness the current C-Max seven-seater and the unlamented Ford Fusion.

REALLY LIKE

... how Ford has gone back to basics in trying to work out what people really want. Despite the styling, the B-Max should be a big hit.

BiTurbo adds premium power

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

IN a range with so many trim and engine permutations, you may be forgiven for overlooking the twin-turbo diesel option added to the Insignia earlier this year.

But the new BiTurbo speaks volumes for Vauxhall's ambition to snap at the heels of premium marques like BMW and Audi.

Both German brands offer silky and potent six-cylinder diesel engines, but Vauxhall cannot now justify such investment since opting out of selling big executive flagships like the Senator and Omega – though the Insignia does a pretty good job of straddling that and its own more mainstream D-segment.

Vauxhall's solution to the engine conundrum, then, is to add an extra turbo to the Insignia's everyday four-cylinder 2.0-litre diesel, boosting output from 160 to 195PS (193bhp). The result is a car that responds like a six-cylinder as the smaller turbo spins up at low revs to deliver pulling power quickly before the main turbo joins in.

It all seems so effortless and, when paired with the all-wheel-drive of the upmarket VX-Line Sports Tourer test car and a slick six-speed gearbox, it can gobble up the cross-country miles and hit 60mph in just 8.6 seconds.

Significantly, Vauxhall has also supported the extra power by fitting its FlexRide adaptive damping as standard on all Insignia BiTurbos – normally a £790 option on front-wheel-drives.

FlexRide automatically tunes the dampers according to how the car is being driven and can also be set to tour and sport modes to sharpen the driving experience still further.

On 4x4 versions like ours, FlexRide is also linked into the car's Torque Transfer Device (TTD) to deliver exceptional traction, grip and control to a level likely to flatter the driver.

And while the official combined fuel consumption, as ever, looks optimistic at 50.4mpg, this is an economical sporting car that should give the

WORTH A LOOK: The 4x4 Sports Tourer is a choice that offers drive experience and style Germans a fright once you get past the equally optimistic £32,390 list price and have a haggle.

OK, the issue of badge snobbery comes into play here; you would need a serious discount to offset the Vauxhall's greater depreciation as well as persuade you not to buy a premium badge, but I always make a case for the Insignia's style.

It was a worthy winner of the European Car of the Year title in 2009 and heralded a string of excellent designs from Vauxhall's British designer Mark Adams and his team.

The saloon/hatch looks like a four-door coupé, while the rakish Sports Tourer is the slickest estate on the market yet still practical, and the much-discussed blade detail abaft the front wheel is a master touch suggesting power.

Apart from the performance flagship VXR, the VX-Line trim on the test car is also as sporty as you can get and includes – as you may have guessed – lots of VXR kit such as the front spoiler, side sills and rear skirt and spoiler plus a leather-covered three-spoke sports steering wheel, leather-covered gearknob and dark headlining.

With the addition of the test car's £1,145 perforated leather sports seats, with electrically-adjustable front ones, the roomy cabin is smart.

Vauxhall has conducted a major upgrade of its interiors over recent years to the point where it has surpassed a couple of so-called premium marques and pulverised many mainstream rivals.

The Insignia's is well organised with quality alloy trimmings and an upmarket finish, complemented by decent ride quality and refined cruising ability and great passenger and load-carrying practicality across all three body styles – in short, it's a car worth spending time in.

The eve of Adam is near VAUXHALL opens order books on its eye-catching Mini and Fiat 500 rival, the Adam, when the Paris Motor Show opens on Thursday, September 27.

As with the two retro stars, the Adam will offer a high level of customisation over and above three trim levels likely to meet most tastes – Jam (fashionable/colourful), Glam (elegant/sophisticated) and Slam (racy/sporty).

Honda sale time launches

HONDA has been staging a summer sale ahead of the 62-plate change and also running a daily draw on the brand website, with prizes ranging from a car or motorcycle down to other Honda products such as a lawnmower.

Top showroom deals are likely to be the new Honda Civic hatchback, pictured, or run-out bargains on the soon-to-be-replaced third-generation CR-V SUV.

Toyota GT86 is real deal

NOT short of media praise, Toyota's GT86 sports coupé, is now making the most of a multi-million-pound advertising splash.

The 'real deal' ad features a computer-generated man who, tired of living in an artificial world, finds the GT86 and uses it to break out into the real world.

And all to the strains of the classic Edith Piaf song Non, Je Ne Regrette Rien.

Range Rover is star weight-watcher

By Steve Loader

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

JAGUAR has been a pioneer of lightweight-aluminium body construction, so it's no surprise that sister brand Land Rover's all-new Range Rover benefits from the same.

And it can now claim to be the world's first SUV to get a lightweight all-aluminium monocoque body structure.

It's not hard to see why the luxury 4x4 adopted it, either: along with aluminium chassis elements, it means the new RR is a whopping 39 per cent/420 kilos lighter than before and delivers much-needed CO₂ emissions savings – there ought to be a motoring weight-watcher-of-the-year prize.

It's the fourth-generation Range Rover since the original arrived more than 40 years ago as a three-door runabout offering farmers, land-owners and the construction industry something with Land Rover off-road ability but far more comfort on- and off-road.

Subsequent generations, though, have made it a luxury brand within a brand while retaining ultimate 4x4 off-road ability – something the aluminium construction can only enhance by giving the car a lower centre of gravity when tackling inclines.

Land Rover says the weight saving and a re-engineering of the air suspension have enhanced the car's on-road ability; the luxurious ride is retained, but the car now delivers flatter, more confident, cornering.

But while a revolution was taking place in construction, the new Range Rover styling is deliberately evolutionary – there are no great surprises about the way it looks.

A revamped version of Land Rover's Terrain Response system is also retained to automatically assess current driving conditions and terrain and select the most suitable vehicle settings.

And while the car's passengers will ride in luxury, the new Range Rover has already done the hard yards to ensure durability and reliability; development vehicles covered millions of miles of arduous tests in more than 20 countries, exposed to extremes of climate and road surfaces.

Order books are now open and customers have the choice of a supercharged V8 petrol engine or TDV6 and TDV8 diesel engines, with delivery expected in early 2013.
